

Antagonism for ROTC decreases

By DALE JENKINS
Staff Writer

Although the hostility toward the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) has decreased since Cathy Watkins was a freshman four years ago in the Naval ROTC program here, she said she still felt extremely self-conscious when she wore her uniform on campus.

Not only have women suffered from criticisms about being in the military, but across the nation attitudes toward students in ROTC in general have not been favorable.

Watkins said students on campus had come up to her and made harsh comments such as "What are you majoring in, murder?"

"The role of the women in the military has changed so fast, a lot of people don't realize how much we (women) contribute. We take over jobs to free infantry," Watkins said.

The recent events have improved the attitudes of some, she said. "Ever since the hostages were taken and Russia invaded Afghanistan, there has been more support for the military," she said.

Will Kain, a junior in NROTC, said he did not feel that the hostility against ROTC which began after the Vietnam War continued now. "It's so relaxed (at UNC); there's no real problem at all," he said.

He said he had never felt like an outcast when wearing his uniform,

Kenny Ray (right) and Gerald Constable, NROTC members ...students say hostility has decreased in recent years which is required of students in the program each Tuesday and Thursday.

The only problem Kain noted about the future of the ROTC was the reinstatement of draft registration, since joining the ROTC could serve as an alternative to being drafted.

Jack D. Stevens, NROTC chairman and a professor of naval science at Carolina, said he felt the bad attitudes toward the program had dissolved. "I don't get the feeling there are positive or negative ideas (about the program)," he said. "It's just what you do."

"We have a full range of students (in the program) — a couple of Morehead scholars, people who have to work quite a bit to get through college, students in the fraternity system. There are residence assistants, etc.," Stevens said. "There is not a stereotype."

The major change in the program in the two and a half years he has been at Carolina was the increase in the number of women coming into the program, he said.

"We have about 15 or 16 women in the program now," he said. There are 145 cadets in the UNC program.

Stevens said interest in ROTC may be increasing. "ROTC is the one place there is no discrimination (against women) by law," he said. "They get penny by penny what the man makes,"

Traffic board suggests monitors

By NORA WILKINSON

Because only 950 new parking spaces are scheduled to become available for the proposed Student Athletic Center, which will seat about 22,000 people, a committee recently recommended that monitors be placed at nearby dorm lots during activities at the center.

The Vice Chancellor's Traffic and Parking Advisory Committee recommended Dec. 3 that parking monitors be placed at the Craige, Ehringhaus, Morrison and Hinton James parking lots during athletic events, allowing only people with valid parking stickers to enter.

Vice Chancellor of Business and Finance John L. Temple, whose office received the recommendation, said, "We will just take their recommendation and hold it until it becomes necessary."

"Most of the events held at the new athletic center when large crowds would be gathering would be at night and on weekends," Temple said. "At these times our faculty would be at home, leaving even more open spaces."

Gordon H. Rutherford, university planning director, said the athletic center was scheduled for completion in 1984. He said planners estimated the number of parking spaces by allowing one space for every four people, taking into account already available parking within 2,500 feet, which parking and transportation specialists said was the distance people were willing to walk.

The specialists determined an additional 950 spaces were needed.

"We have, today, enough spaces for everybody who wants a parking space on campus," Rutherford said. "That's not to say there are enough where they want them."

"However, it would not serve the University's purpose to build parking it does not need," Rutherford said. Another factor in determining the number of spaces built was landscaping. "We don't want a sea of asphalt," he said.

Ernest Williamson, Educational Foundation executive vice president, said his office anticipated no parking problems at the new athletic center.

Student Body President Bob Saunders said athletic center planners also had to consider the Chapel Hill Town Council's opposition to the construction of large parking lots which discourages use of the town's bus system.

The University had to get a special-use permit from the town to build the athletic center. "The fact that the University was conscious of the town's attitude was a real selling point."

"Remember that most games are at night when there is some excess space in the hospital, Ramshead and commuter lots," Saunders said.

He said the F-lot, Bell Tower lot and hospital parking deck also would be used, with a shuttle system to the athletic center from designated lots. But student lots at Craige, James, Ehringhaus and Morrison are much closer.

"The committee's recommendation guarantees that student lots will be protected during basketball games," Saunders said.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

In the next to the last verse in the Bible, God's revelation of Himself to man, Jesus Christ says: "SURELY I COME QUICKLY, AMEN." The Apostle John answers: "EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS."

"He that endureth to the end shall be saved. . . Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." If I don't "endure to the end" I will be an offense in that day, "for he that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit — offensive — for the kingdom of God." If there is not given to me a "crown of life," then surely I wear a crown of death, eternal death! All profane folks will be found to offend, whether it is from cursing or taking the name of God in vain by insincerity of worship and profession. Sabbath desecrators offend; using the day God sanctified for His own honor and to be a blessing to man in giving him one day in seven to "seek the Lord while He may be found, and call on Him while He is near," using this day for his own work, profit, pleasure, sports, and satisfaction of the lusts of the flesh.

Time might fail to tell of others who offend and do iniquity like Pontius Pilate, who on account of fear and favor are afraid to stand for that which they know to be right; or like Judas Iscariot would sell the Master and Righteousness "down the river" for money! It appears that most of God's Laws and Commandments are offensive to our generation. Herein lies the answer to the question: Why do the heathen rage!

In these days when it seems that "everybody is doing P.O. BOX 405 DECATUR, GEORGIA 30031

it. It is not pleasant to think of Christ's angels gathering all such for the furnace of fire. Instead of praying Him to "Come quickly," one might be inclined to do as the gardener did when the lord of the vineyard told him to cut down the barren fig tree: Lord, don't cut it down yet, leave it a while longer, stir up your people to dig about it, dung it, with the hopes it will bring forth fruit, and not have to be cut down!

Why is it that we do not pay more attention, why do we not continually drum such solemn, even terrible truth, into our hearts and minds! Why is it that in our teaching and preaching we don't stress the fact that when Christ "cometh to make up His jewels" there will be a discerning "between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." — Malachi 3:18, etc. In our time it appears that much of the teachings of Christ to His disciples in the parables is forgotten, forsaken, and not applied to our lives and problems! If, in our testimony and witnessing we talked as much about the danger of being "tares, offenders, doors of iniquity," and the danger of being gathered in the end by the angels for the furnace of fire, as we do in trying to persuade others that we have been "born again" and that Christ "dwells within," doubtless the angels would not have such a big job of "feeding the fires of the furnace."
