Candidates restate platforms

By KATHERINE LONG Staff Writer

Candidates running for student offices spoke at a forum Wednesday night in Morehead Cellar.

Candidates for student body president discussed the proposed student activities fee increase.

Joe Buckner and Scott Norberg said they favored the increase. They said the increase would redistribute activities fees so summer school students would not have to pay money that would eventually go into activities for fall and spring students.

Tim Smith said he opposed the increase because it would give the CGC more money. Smith said there was already a surplus in Student Government. Bozymski said he would study the problem.

Buckner stressed his experience working outside of Student Government. He said he would increase ticket prices to Chapel Thrill and study ways to reduce textbook prices.

Norberg emphasized his experience in Student Government, and said he would study the problem of high textbook prices.

Smith said he would work to change the noise ordinance and he said student services should be moved to an office under Student Government.

Bozymski said he would encourace more student input through the DTH, radio talk shows and dorm newsletters. Carolina Athletic Association candidate Harold Cooley said he would make the office more accessible to students and would add four to six people to the staff. Chuck Gardiner said although he was in favor of expanding the office, several committees were not necessary. "The last thing we need is more bureaucracy," he said.

Steve Theriot said he would establish four committees to free the CAA president to work with other problems that arose. "What the CAA does need is organization," he said.

Jake Kelly said she would set up seven committees to expand the office. She emphasized her involvement in sports. Jim Hummel, candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor, said he would strengthen the newspaper's ombudsman's staff in order to obtain story ideas from students. "We Heel," he said.

Thomas Jessiman said the ombudsman staff was not an effective system. "We shouldn't assign a lot of importance to it," he said. Jessiman said story ideas should come from more attentive reporters.

Residence Hall Association candidate Robert Bianchi said he would encourage need a set way to funnel ideas into the Tar more student involvement. He emphasized that RHA affected the lives of all students who lived on campus.

Linda Howey said, if elected, she would work on visitation, security and room rent increases. Howey also said she would establish better officer training. Candidates for CGC District 11 repreartists of all times. What was his stage name?

The above question is only a sample of the variety of questions that could be posed tonight when the UNC College Bowl All-Star team competes against some faculty members at 8 p.m. in room 202 of the Carolina Union. Union College Bowl Coordinator Ernie Johnston said the winner of the match, which is being held in conjunction with the Union's all-nighter "Nocturnal Sensation," will donate $500 provided by Carolina Annual Giving to either the Scholarship Fund or the Faculty Development Program.

Carolina Annual Giving is the largest source of unrestricted alumni donations, and helps finance programs like the marching band and the Yackety Yack.

Johnston said the match was being held in part to promote "Nocturnal Sensation." "I'm sure there's a lot of people who would like to see the faculty get beat. A lot of people follow College Bowl," he said. "It will probably draw more people to "Nocturnal Sensation" than would normally come."

College Bowl games are divided into two 14 halves, Johnston said. The team that correctly answers a toss-up question gets a chance at a bonus question. Ten points are awarded for a toss-up nuestion and correctly answered bonus questions are awarded between 20 and 30 points.

James Pence, the faculty team organizer, said his team was not making any special preparations for the game. "We are viewing it as a fun thing to do," he said.

The All-Star team, however, is making a variety of preparations for the match, Johnston said. "Most of the preparation is mental, getting into the right frame of mind," he said. "When preparing for tournaments, the players practice twice a week for about an hour, answering questions used in previous games."

Tom Stumpf, a faculty team member, said he would not be surprised if the faculty team was destroyed in the match. "For the faculty, it's kind of a pickup match," he said. "A good player has to be quick and has to have memorized the almanac. Faculty members tend to be deliberate in answering questions."

The All-Star team will represent UNC at the regional tournament in Johnson City, Tenn., Feb. 12-14. The College Bowl is run as a subsidiary of Reader's Digest.

more announce for CGC seats

Two students announced their candidates for Campus Governing Council representatives today.

Deborah Houston, a junior health administration major from Charlotte, is running for CGC District 20 representative. District 20 consists of Bim and Popular streets and Hilmont and Old Well Apartments.

She said she felt she could "bridge the every-widening gap of communication" between the residents in her district and between off-campus residents in general.

"Communication is so bad that in talking with many students I have found that they are not aware of what district they live in," she said, "and furthermore, what the Campus Governing Council is or does."

She has participated in Black Student Movement activities, was a member of the committee on the "Recruitment and Retention of Black Faculty Members" and a member of Student Government's State Affairs Committee.

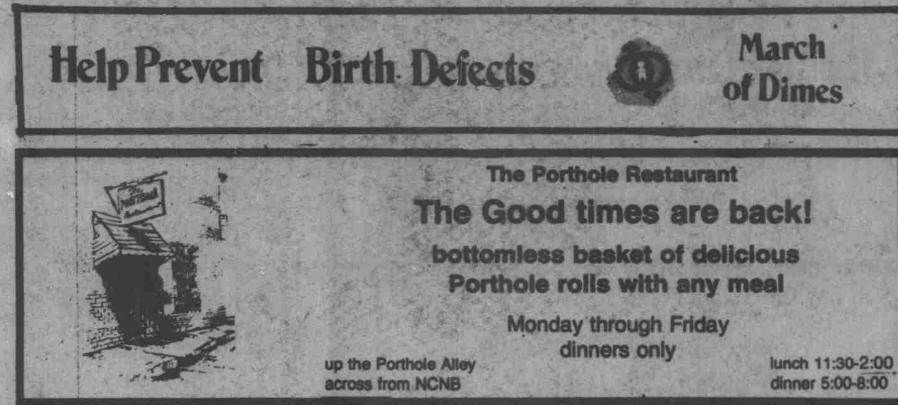

James Mills, a sophomore industrial relations major from Wadesboro, is running for District 22, which is an off-campus district also.

Mill's said he would investigate a textbook rental system and refund problems he encountered in the housing department. He said he would like to find another way to raise money for Chapel Thrill and would like to resume funding to programs for students to study abroad.

Mills was an orientation counselor this year.

to hold 99 candles! Wonder if there was any one present who could blow them all out with one "puff!" In the Book of Job the question is asked: "Should a wise man fill his belly with the east wind?"

Would guess that there are many of our modern writers, commentators, columnists, etc., who have so "filled their belly with the east wind" they could blow out that many candles, candles of light, with one puff, or gust! At times I read things that make me think of what John O. Calvin said of one of his literary opponents: "He has the mouth of a pig, and pokes it everywhere!" One day after the celebration of his 99th birthday Abraham was sitting in the door of his tent in "the heat of the day". Suddenly he became aware that three men were standing nearby. He got up, ran to meet them, humbly and reverently greated them and entertained them to the Best of his ability. The electors turned dut to be His Filence. Geo Almighty, and two of His Angels! (At least three times The Bible calls Abraham "The Friend of God").

The purpose of the visit was two fold: To tell Abraham the time was near when God would fulfill His promise to him, for which he had been patiently and obediently waiting for near 25 years, and would give him a son and heir by his wife Sarah. It made no difference to The him he was on the way to investigate conditions in Sodom and Gomorrah: The cry of their wickedness and sin was so great and grievous it had mounted up to heaven.

Abraham knew God well enough, and he knew Sodom well enough to know the city was doomed, and when God turned His face towards Sodom: "Abraham stood before the Lord" to plead. He appealed to God's justice and righteousness, basing his request that the city be spared on the grounds that perhaps there was righteousness in it, righteousness God imputed to some by Grace through Faith. He did not ask God to spare the sodomites, homosexuals, whoremongers, and other perverts, except for the sake of the righteous that might be therein. The abominations are doomed and headed for the fire of God's wrath - it is the duty and business of "The Friends of God" to gull as many out of the fire as possible, "hating garments spotted by the flesh." Abraham did not ask God to spare the city if there were less than ten rightous found in it!

In many respects the sins of our land, and the world, are imilar or the same as those of Sodom. All "Friends of God" need to follow in the steps of "The Father of The Faithful" and stand up before God and plead for our homes, our kin, our nation, and all men.
