

Fencers come back home to face rival State tonight

By ADAM KANDELL
Staff Writer

The UNC's men's and women's fencing teams, in a key Atlantic Coast Conference match-up, play host to the N.C. State Wolfpack tonight at 7 in Carmichael Auditorium.

Several of the team members returned early this morning from a Junior Olympic Tournament in Cleveland, Ohio, in preparation for the final weeks of the regular ACC season. Going into the match with State, the Tar Heels' record in ACC competition stands at 3-1 with the loss coming early in the season to Clemson.

The Junior Olympic Tournament was a three-day event sponsored by the Amateur Fencer's League of America. Individuals from around the nation competed for the privilege of qualifying for the Junior World Games later in the year.

Two of UNC's 10 qualifiers for the tournament have chances to make the world games team. John Hodde in the epee and saber John Friedberg have been two of the most consistent performers for Coach Ron Miller, having kept the Tar Heels in contention for the ACC championship.

A possible stumbling block for the Tar Heels may be the foes from Raleigh. "State's biggest rival is us," Tar Heel fencer Steve Bachmann said. "They will be up for the match because we beat them in Raleigh and they have a chance to get us back at home in Carmichael." The Tar Heels easily defeated the Wolfpack back on Jan. 27. "We beat them pretty good in all three weapons," Bachmann said. "Everyone is fairly confident about tonight."

Bachmann cautions that the strong State rivalry will be a major factor in the match, plus the fact that State recruits all of its fencers while the majority of UNC's squads (both men's and women's) come from the physical education classes Miller instructs.

"They're all solid fencers, good fencers," said Bachmann of the rebuilding State squad. "They've recruited fairly heavily from the New York and New Jersey areas and their team is stronger than the last couple of years."

While UNC combines experienced members with some fine young talent, State overall is a young squad. The Wolfpack's strong point will be a very competitive foil team plus the individual ability of epee standout John Shea.

Bachmann feels that, although the Tar Heels will be favored tonight, there is always the chance of an upset, especially with the long-standing rivalry between the two schools.

UNC's men's golf team participated in a tournament in Gainesville, Fla., over the weekend. Florida State captured the invitational while the Tar Heels finished sixth, 14 strokes off the pace. FSU's Paul Azingar won individual honors, shooting a 209. Billy Williford's three-round total of 214 was tops for North Carolina.

Gymnasts perform well but lose

By JACKIE BLACKBURN

The road to success led to Alabama for the University of Alabama and the Oklahoma State gymnastics teams, but Carolina's gymnastic squad took the bypass.

Then again, success is not always judged by who got the blue ribbon. While UNC finished third in the Friday Alabama meet and placed fourth in the Jacksonville Invitational Saturday, the team did not feel as if it had lost.

"We felt really good about the performance," junior standout Tiffany Terranova said. "The coach was pleased. The teams we competed against were very good. They are among the top in the country."

Karen Kaiser led the UNC team with a fourth-place finish in the all-around Friday. The next night Kaiser finished sixth overall. Her teammates Terranova and Elise Slobodin scored consistently high for the Heels.

"Everyone did as well as expected," Slobodin said. "There were minimal falls. We were strong as a team."

Even though the meets were back-to-back, Slobodin said the team was not affected by fatigue.

"We were affected (by fatigue) in Maryland. We knew what would happen this time, so we were prepared," Slobodin said.

In Tuscaloosa Friday night, Alabama captured first place as a team. Last year in Chapel Hill Carolina beat Alabama by two points.

Saturday evening the Heels competed against four top universities in the Jacksonville Invitational. Oklahoma State won that meet, but Carolina did not go home disappointed. They were able to avenge a loss to host team Jacksonville, who defeated the Heels last year, by beating Jacksonville out of fourth place.

The Heels face N.C. State tonight in Raleigh at 7:30. The meet should be nothing like this past weekend for Carolina, since this is the first year State has had a gymnastics team.
