Game of the week

This was definitely the game of the week. Just look at the facts. Perennial grad/ind basketball bully and this year's grail mural champion Dental School "Healers" pitted against another toughie, Law School "Caveats."

Adding to the drama was the presence of several former collegiate players on both squads. Leading the dentist-to-be were former Catawba College player, Mike Mahew, Wake stand-out Mark Dale, and Rob Prewitt who played for Joe B. Hall at Kentucky for one year.

Heading the Law team were former Tar Heel Bruce Buckley and John Turner, a former Cary High School star who played at Presbyterian College. On paper and on the court these guys are good.

The overtime game ended with a spectacular Turner-tap in of Buckley's desperation, off-balance shot leaving the underdog Caveats with a stunning 56-55 win. Seconds before, at the other end of the court, the Healers pulled their own "come from behind" miracle of sorts with Andy Brown's shot that put them ahead 55-54.

It was that type of game throughout, and one most referees avoid. Unfortunately, intense playing, coupled with outstanding athletic ability and Woollen's short courts, often causes flared tempers, pushes and shoves. The game was extremely rough inside with two technicals and 30 personal fouls called. But for a IM game of this magnitude, the sportsmanship was about average.

The inside play of Buckley, Turner and forward Ray Sparrow proved to be the difference for the Law School this year, and in this game. But they had to overcome an excellent performance by the veteran Mahew, who finished with 20 points (unofficially) and countless rebounds.

Buckley led the Law's scoring with 17 points, many of which came from the foul line. Turner, who was saddled with foul trouble early, added 14 points and Sparrow finished with 10.

Dale left the game early with an injured knee. He combines with Prewitt to make possibly the best backcourt in UNC intramurals.

Other Caveat players include Rick Magee, Allen Irving, John Blust and Charles Bowmann. Rounding out the Healer team are Jack King, Mike Sheets and Andy Brown.

The Caveats are 5-0, ranked fourth, and the Healers stand at 4-1.

Hall's role more than just clerical - she links program and students

Note: this is the fifth in a series on the IM-Rec staff...

Her bosses say it best.

"She has to be a jack of all trades," said UNC IM-Rec Director Edgar Shields of his secretary Barbara Hall. "I think any intramural director would agree that the whole program revolves around the intramural secretary."

"It is not a standard secretarial job," Shields added. "You have to learn to be on top of every aspect of the total program."

Assoc. IM-Rec Director Marty Pomerantz calls Hall's position the "hub of the wheel." "She is the direct link between the program and the students," Pomerantz said. "She is the only person in the program whose absence is immediately felt."

Hall is modest about the flattering comments and almost embarrassed with all the importance being placed on her job. But she knows it and enjoys it.

"I love working with the students," Hall said. "The informal atmosphere of the office is great and I like working for Ed Shields."

Hall's position is simply defined by the university as a secretary "4" level, clerical support staff for the Dept. of Physical Education, which includes the IM-Rec program. But her "real" job description entails much more.

Other than typing and handling routine inquiries, Hall serves as the payroll representative of the program. She coordinates the payroll process for a large staff of office workers, graduate students and student officials (referees).

"I am also Dr. Shields academic secretary, but I also provide clerical support for the associate director and our two new assistant directors," Hall said.

Other job duties vary from providing art work needed to public relations through her role in taking and answering inquiries for a full-time staff of four, three graduate students and a dozen undergraduates. Obviously she must know what is going on with all the staff members and their duties, or as Shields said, learning the whole program.

Hall, is a native of Virginia Beach, Va. She was graduated from Princess Anne High School in Virginia Beach and received a English and History (double major) degree from Old Dominion University in Norfolk.

She has a career goal in personnel management but for now she wants to continue to climb the clerical ranks with the university. Hall who replaced Paula Davis now with Orthopedics, had been with the University's Personnel Dept. before getting into the University transfer system that led her to Woollen Gym.

Getting the IM-Rec job was Hall's first exposure to the insides of an intramural program.

"I was never aware of the total scope of a program like this," she said. "I never realized that so many people participated in competitive activity other than varsity athletics."

Hall sees the IM-Rec program as a benefit to every participant if it is used in the right way. "I now have a healthy respect for what competitive activity can do to round out a college experience."

But Hall says the participant must do his/her part to make the program successful and beneficial.

"Students must do their part, be more aware of their part in the program," she said. "This includes being responsible for deadlines, scheduling, showing up on time and most of all showing good sportsmanship—to enjoy the program. As soon as the fun ceases, the benefits cease."

The IM-Rec program is obviously benefitting from Barbara Hall's contributions.
