

Last 'Home' performance tonight

By DONNA WHITAKER

They hail from the Big Apple, but members of The Negro Ensemble Company brought a homespun flavor to Memorial Hall Monday night in their superb performance of the comedy Home.

native Samm-Art Williams, last night and will appear at 8 tonight in Memorial Hall for their final performance. The production is part of the eight-day Black Arts Festival, sponsored by the Black Student Movement. Home is a semi-autobiographical play that traces 13 years in the life of Cephus Miles, a black native of the fictitious Cross Roads, N.C. It is filled with anecdotes, humor, suspense and black dialogue.

The sparse setting of wooden columns, boxes, picket fences and gold-colored beams, gives the audience room to concentrate on the fast-paced dialogue of Miles, played by Samuel Jackson, and the two women. L. Scott Caldwell, who plays Pattie Mae Wells, Miles' lover, and Carol Lynn Maillard, switch roles; playing the children, the drunks, the junkies and loved ones in Miles' life.

Home begins in the present, with Miles reminiscing about the past. He remembers how he grew up as a child who loved the land, migrated to the city and its "dead promises of the wonderland" because he was an ex-con, and came back home. Home was a 1980 Tony nominee for best play.

Tickets are $4 and $6, and can be purchased at the Union box office.

FREE SPEAKER CLINIC!

How Do Your Speakers Rate?

Not all speakers are created equal. Some speakers are designed to deliver a lot of bass. Some are built to produce a very bright treble. A truly accurate speaker should produce a smooth linear response across the entire audio spectrum. We are very pleased to have been chosen to host this special one day speaker clinic that will show how accurate your speakers are. Factory representatives from E.P.I. will be on hand to test your speakers for overall accuracy. Bring in one of your speakers during this clinic and we'll test it for...

- on axis frequency response
- off axis frequency response
- impedance curve test.

Just bring in one of your speakers and we'll test it free...give you a written report and explain the results.

"Tex Ritter, Lawrence Welk, Jim Nabors, Slim Whitman, Tony Curtis, Edgar Allen Poe, Robert McNamara and Muhammed Ali are the major influences on my music," said Matt Schene with a straight face.

"And Barry Manilow, 'Copacabana' is my favorite song," he added impishly. Schene, a singer-songwriter and business major, will perform his special brand of music at 8 p.m. today in the Carolina Union snackbar. Schene will appear as part of the Carolina Union Social Committee's Local Lyrics series.

UNC student to perform own music

"But seriously the major influences on my music are James Taylor and Jackson Brown in folk and George Benson, Earl Klugh and Tom Scott in jazz."

Schene, who has been playing guitar for about 10 years, hopes to develop his own style mixing folk and jazz music. And there is a great deal of truth in his quip. Schene's music is made up of many elements, focusing mainly on the serious and the satirical.

He already has a large canon of material written. Schene's songs include "White Dove," "El Salvador," "I Thought I Was A Megalomaniac," a scathing attack on Ronald Reagan; and the infamous "Eat That Chocolate Cake."

"The purpose of my music is to entertain and to make people think," said Schene. "And when I find my own sound I hope to turn professional."

Between working on his music and studying for business classes Schene devotes himself to many other activities. His many hobbies include "jumping off Granville East in a paper sack, yawning in front of economics professors and watching Championship Wrestling on T.V."
