Lacrosse championship deserves its own recognition

On Saturday, the lacrosse team brought back the first national championship for Carolina since 1957.

Well, that is wonderful, but it is not the most significant factor in the final 14-13 victory over Johns Hopkins.

This victory wasn't a rah-rah win over an ACC archrival, and it did more than give Tar Heel fans a few extra bragging rights. Now that the huge 1981 lacrosse trophy is in the trophy case at Carmichael, it is time to quit talking about this championship in the same breath with the basketball team's successes.

It is time to stop putting graduated values on championships in each sport. One is not worth more than another no matter how basketball-crazy this state is. It would be nice to win championships in each sport, but one is no more desirable than another. They just mean different things.

This lacrosse championship does mean that UNC's lacrosse team and its members have reached the height of their sport. These guys did not fall behind in classes, nor did they run sprints up and down the field in practice, hour after hour every week for the adoration of students. They also didn't win the championship to sign a multi-year contract with a pro team right out of college and be financially secure for life.

This year, the Tar Heel lacrosse team is the best there is — anywhere.

What's more, Coach Willie Scroggs left the cradle of Baltimore to come to a place where lacrosse was about as popular as grits are up North. He came at a time when the lacrosse program was just short of ruin. The former coach, Paul Doty had suspended 14 players, and morale was low.

Scroggs worked hard to recruit enough talented lacrosse players to turn the program around. This national title is a memento of the team's long hours and hard work.

Even though the lacrosse team doesn't get as much money as some of the other sports, Scroggs said the program was adequately funded and that the money was not the most important factor.

"What we really want is the fan support," he said. "The fans around here are great, and we saw a big increase in the number of people coming to the games as compared to last year. The Navy game was great, especially considering that the students weren't in school and hadn't started the summer session yet."

Scroggs also said that both the Virginia and Maryland matches would be played in Chapel Hill next year and should boost the turnout.

Scroggs has no immediate plans to leave UNC. "I'm still here, and I'm going to do the best I can to try to build the program and maintain the level we are on now," he said.

"We had a great recruiting year and our schedule is going to be good next year. It looks as though we'll be playing Hopkins up in Baltimore during the regular season."

There is no doubt that the fans around here could turn a successful program into a great one. Once they get involved, there's just no stopping them. It will take that kind of continued support to keep lacrosse growing in the South and at Carolina.

It's worthless and downright unappreciative for anyone to talk of trading the lacrosse championship for a basketball championship, and besides, it looks like the Tar Heels could have a good shot at both again next year.

UNC's last goals came from Burnett, who made a brilliant behind-the-back shot, and from Jeff Homire, who scored with just 1:54 remaining.

But lacrosse monarchs like Johns Hopkins don't roll over and die. The Blue Jays' Brent Schneck and Jeff Cook scored once more each but ran out of time, with Cook's goal coming seconds before the end of the game.

Both teams had plenty of close fouls called and shots that barely missed. "We took excellent shots, but some of them just didn't go in," Scroggs said. "Monte (Hill) shot a good one that just whizzed right over the top of the goal."

Now that this season is over, the question is whether Carolina will be able to compete consistently on a par with schools such as Hopkins.

"We only lost four seniors," Scroggs said. "So just about everybody will be back and we had a great recruiting year. And next year the fan support should be even better than it was at the end of this year."

'WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?'

Psalm 2:1 and Acts 4:25

Some years ago, a young man around 20 years of age, asked for work on the farm. After he had worked several days I learned he was out of jail on bond, having been charged with taking part in a holdup of a store, which he admitted. I called together the few workers on the farm together with "Mr. Holdup," and advised them of the kind of man we were working with. Mr. "Holdup" sorter "flared up" and said if I did not want to work him it was o.k. "Certainly I do not want to work you. Last Saturday I put you and a high school boy out splitting wood with axes, wedges, and a maul. A man with as much devil and hell in him as you might have split the boy's head open with the axe in order to take his money! You also worked with another man using shovels. Is it right for me to ask that man to work with you when you might knock him in the head with the shovel, since you have chosen to try to make a living forcing people who have made their money honestly to give it to you, killing them if necessary!

Genuine Christianity don't tolerate evil! One branch of Christianity is charged by God Almighty to take vengeance, and do away with evil and rebellion against law and order. Read the 13th chapter of Romans. The Bible not only says: "Resist the devil;" but it also says: "Give no place to the devil!"

"Mr. Holdup" was paid for his time, and asked to get off the place, and stay off. However, we told him that since those who were in authority saw fit to let such a dangerous man "run on the loose," I would cooperate as far as I could. If he thought over the matter and would come back in three days and express his purpose, determination, and make a promise to go right and act a gentleman, he could go back to work. He did not come back, but hope he is going straight.

From the President of our great nation on down to the humblest citizen we should be thoroughly ashamed of ourselves for the great crime and violence abroad in our land. We would be much better off if a great drive was launched to make crime and open evil, poverty-stricken, so that it would perish from famine and hunger.

"Take thou away from Me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let judgement run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." Amos 5:23. Boil this passage down, and in plain language God says to us: "Your worship is offensive to Me unless you put away the evil from among yourselves, stop crime, murder, immorality, violence, etc."
