decree

John R. Jordan Jr., chairman of the board, said the approval of the consent decree was a sign that satisfied the needs of all concerned.

"UNC will control its own affairs, and the consent decree commits us to establish programs for further desegregation of our institutions and upgrading the five traditionally black schools," he said.

Jordan said he was disappointed with the defense fund's opposition to the plan. "If they would give it a chance, they would be pleased with it," he said.

Rauh, who has denounced the settlement since its conception, said in a brief statement that Judge Dupree's approval of the fraudulent actions of Secretary Bell and President Friday was a ridiculous representation of federal judicial procedure. "We will press our efforts in the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia to declare Bell's triple endrun illegal," Rauh said.

Rauh described the triple endrun in a memorandum he submitted to Dupree last week as a judicial validation of the Department of Education and the state's attempt to get around the federal courts of the District of Columbia, around Title VI of the Civil Rights

Hackley accepts new post at Pine Bluff

By SPEED HALLMAN

Lloyd V. Hackley, UNC assistant vice president for academic affairs, has accepted the position of chancellor of the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff, Ark.

Hackley was to serve on a four-member University panel reporting to a federal judge on the progress of the University's desegregation plan. A UNC administrator since October 1977, Hackley was instrumental in establishing 43 new academic programs at pre-

Act of 1964, and around the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

In Friday's ruling, Dupree discounted Rauh's statement of fraudulent action between Bell and Friday, stating that "the court has found nothing to support an inference that the agreements reached in the consent decree are the result of anything other than arms-length bargaining between the able counsel on both sides."

Dupree wrote that the decree did not meet the federal criteria for eliminating duplication at black and white universities, but complied with the criteria formulated by DHEW in 1977 for dismantling "racially-segregated dominantly black institutions in the system between 1978 and 1980.

Hackley said that he was looking forward to the position at Arkansas with great anticipation. "I want to take a good, hard look at the programs offered and make sure that the quality of them is at the highest possible level," he said. "I want to ensure that the programs offered can help graduates get high paying jobs."

Raymond H. Dawson, UNC vice president for academic affairs, said that Hackley was one of the most capable and promising young administrators in American education.

one of the most capable and promising young administrators in American education.

"In a brief period of time he has made outstanding contributions to UNC and we are grateful for what he has done," Dawson said.

Hackley will begin serving as chancellor at Pine Bluff September 1.

Pine Bluff, established in 1873, is a predominantly black university with approximately 3,000 students.

Court. "We are taking everything one step at a time," he said. "We don't want to say what we are going to do if we lose, because we think we are going to win."

Dr. Charles W. Ward, President of the NAACP Chapter for Raleigh and Apex, said the North Carolina desegregation matter was a landmark case. "(Dupree's approval) was a step backward for the educational process not only for North Carolina but also for the entire United States.

"All the people who benefited from a sound educational system will be cheated by this decision because the plan does not guarantee anything," he said.

Siamese twins face complications

By SPEED HALLMAN

Doctors at N.C. Memorial Hospital are hoping that Siamese twins born there earlier this month will not need surgery to repair sections of their small intestines.

"There's not been much change in the last few days," Hospital spokesman Richard A. Broom said. "They're in good condition, their vital signs are stable, and it is not a critical problem," he said.

Broom said that X-rays revealed a section of each of the twins' intestines which was enlarged. Their stomachs and lower portions of intestines are normal, he said.

The twin girls, Deanna and Dianna, were delivered by Caesarean section July 9 to a 32-year-old North Carolina woman. They were separated in a 3½ hour operation 16 hours after birth.

Broom said that a fibrous band running through the tissue that joined the twins had put pressure on the intestines, causing the enlargement. Doctors thought that separating the twins would reduce the enlargement, but this has not happened, Broom said.

"If it becomes obvious that it will not correct itself, they (the doctors) will go ahead and operate," Broom said.

For the Record

The July 16 issue of The Tar Heel incorrectly reported that in-state tuition would increase by 20 percent and out-of-state tuition would increase by 9 percent. These figures were reversed and the actual increase for in-state students will be 9 percent and 20 percent for out-of-state students. The Tar Heel regrets the error.
