

Involvement is easy Organization variety expands college experience

By LYNN EARLEY
DTH Staff Writer

The day the average freshman landed on the Hill, his Orientation Counselor probably told him to "get involved." The next night at Convocation, speakers told him about all the great opportunities at Carolina to "get involved." The third day when that same freshman vaguely mentioned something about homesickness, someone else mentioned extra-curricular activities and yelled at him: "GET INVOLVED!"

By now that student and many others might be wondering in what they are to "get involved." Fortunately, UNC offers a wide variety of activities for students interested in extending their college education beyond the classroom. In almost any area a student's interests lie, there is an appropriate organization.

One well-known service group is Alpha Phi Omega, a coed service fraternity which sponsors activities including campus blood drives, a textbook co-op, campus tours and lost and found. APO also directs Campus Chest Charities. These charities are fund-raising events, including an auction, raffles and the annual Mile of Pennies.

The Campus Y offers the Big Buddy Program, the Campus-Community Link (involving students and senior citizens), the Crafts Bazaar, Hunger Action, Tutoring and the Walk for Humanity, plus other scheduled events. The Campus Y focuses on involvement with the community, international issues and campus issues.

Students who are musically inclined can become a member in the Tar Heel Bands or in the Department of Music's organizations. The Department of Bands has the Marching Tar Heels, the Carolina Pep Band and the University Concert Band. Most applicants qualify for membership without an audition. Interested persons should go by the band office in the basement of the Union or call 962-1080.

The Department of Music sponsors the University Symphony Orchestra, the UNC Wind Ensemble, the UNC Opera Theatre, the Jazz Band, the Brass Choir, the Percussion Ensemble, the New Music Ensemble, the Collegium Musicum, the Carolina Choir, the Chamber Singers and the UNC Glee Clubs. All of these musical organizations are open to qualified students and carry academic credit.

Sports enthusiasts can participate on the Intramurals teams sponsored by dorm halls or can join one of the sports clubs. Some of the active sports clubs last year were the bassmasters, cycling, crew, football, ice hockey, outing, racquetball, rugby, sailing, scuba, soccer, table tennis, volleyball, water polo, or water skiing.

Honoraries are an essential part of campus life. The Order of the Golden Fleece honors leadership, inspirational character and other ideals. The Order of the Old Well honors academic and extra-curricular achievement. The Order of the Grail/Valkyries acknowledges scholarship, service and character. Phi Eta Sigma recognizes freshman academic excellence. Phi Beta Kappa honors high academic achievement, also.

Other Honoraries are the Order of the Silver Key, Society of Janus, Society of Hellenas, the Order of Gimgoul, Order of the Gorgon's Head, Order of the Ginkgo, Styx, Alpha Epsilon Delta, Rho Chi Society and Gamma Beta Epsilon. Students must be nominated for most of these societies.

Students are offered involvement in the political arena. The UNC-CH College Republicans actively participate in elections and campaigns and offer speakers and programs. Also politically active on campus is the UNC Young Democrats Club.

AIIESEC (International Association of Students in Economic and Business Management) attracts students interested in International Affairs. World travel is a main topic of discussion for this group, which is located in the International Center in the Carolina Union.

The Hillel Foundation is a group of Jewish students which plans social events and discussions designed to maintain contact between Jewish students. Hillel is located on Cameron Avenue.

The Association for Women Students is designed to keep women in touch with issues concerning them. The organization attempts to sponsor speakers and performers and develop programs and publications. AWS is located in Suite D of the Carolina Union.

The Carolina Gay Association sponsors social activities and informative series. CGA is located in Suite B of the Student Union and offers a newsletter and scheduled events, including speakers and other programs.

The Black Student Movement serves as a center for social and cultural identification on campus. The BSM takes active involvement in areas and issues that effect black students. All students are encouraged to participate. The BSM office is located in the Carolina Union.

Other popular activities on campus include the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Society, Toronto Exchange and the Carolina Symposium. Almost each academic area has a corresponding club, also.

These organizations are only a sample of the myriad of groups ranging from the Liberation Literature Club to the Association to Counteract the Influence of Disco to the UNC Dungeons and Dragons Club. The opportunities to "get involved" are unlimited.

To get more information, interested students should contact the individual organizations, the appropriate academic department, or the Department of Student Life.

Norberg's involvement leads to higher position

By ELAINE McCLATCHEY

Scott Norberg was concerned during his freshman year about the segregation of blacks and whites on campus so he joined the University Services Committee of Student Government and later became a special assistant for minority affairs. In his sophomore year, he was selected as an executive assistant to the student body president. He served in that position his junior year until his election to a new position ... student body president.

This summer Norberg was elected to an even higher position as president of The University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments. Norberg heads a group of 16 student body presidents in the UNC system.

Norberg said students can have a great impact on what goes on at the University. There are roughly 100 positions open in the executive branch including committee positions, residence hall and apartment representatives and Action Line workers.

The largest number of students are needed for Student Government Outreach. Outreach is a network of on-and-off-campus students that provides information about what Student Government is doing and also acts as a sounding board for students with complaints. Norberg said he hoped to get representatives from every residence hall and apartment complex.

Norberg said this work is an excellent way for new students to find out about campus issues and get exposure to the variety of Student Government activities.

Action Line, an information service provided by Student Government, also provides new students a chance to learn about the problems on students' minds, he said.

A few committee positions are also available for students who are interested in concentrating on a particular subject. Committees include Transportation, Town Relations, Academic Procedures, University Services, Athletics, National Affairs, Housing, University Relations, State Affairs and Student Services.

Students interested in working for Student Government should go to Suite C on the second floor of the Carolina Union.

UNIVERSITY MALL Chapel Hill

Services render invaluable help

By TAMMY WRIGHT

Have you and your landlord come to blows recently about a broken dishwasher? If so, an organization at UNC that may interest you is Student Legal Services.

SLS is one of many campus organizations that provides assistance to UNC students. Others include University Placement Service, University Counseling Center, the Mental Health section of Student Consumer Action Union and the Human Sexuality Information and Counseling Service.

These organizations offer services ranging from help in education and career decisions to help in personal and health problems and are available at little or no cost.

SLS, in Suite 222 of the Carolina Union, gives legal advice and counseling and provides representation within the restrictions of available funding. The program assists students in understanding the law, in determining whether a lawyer's services are necessary and in referrals to a lawyer.

SLS does not represent or advise in cases where the dispute is between students and cannot represent students if their dispute involves litigation against the University or the state. SLS makes court appearances only in surrounding counties.

The UNC Reading Program offers its services to students who wish to improve their reading and study efficiency said Mimi Keever, an assistant with the program. The program is voluntary, individualized and gives no academic credit. Students may choose to work on skills such as speed reading, comprehension, study techniques and test-taking skills.

Students can begin at any time during the school year by registering in 204 Phillips Annex. A $10 fee is required. For additional information, call 962-3782.

The University Placement Services, in 211 Hanes hall, helps to build skill in job-seeking, interviewing and resume writing. This service is responsible for bringing to campus firms that are looking for new employees.

UPS also has resources that help students find the names and addresses of employer contacts.

The first of six workshops to be held this fall is scheduled for Sept. 8. Also, an orientation meeting is scheduled for Sept. 9 to explain the services of the UPS office.

"The University Placement Service is really something to get involved in, especially seniors," UPS counselor Pat Carpenter said. "Job recruiters will be on campus sometime in the middle of September."

A service often confused with UPS is the University Counseling Center.

"The basic goal of the University Counseling Center is to help people make the right decision as to what field they would like to pursue," said Lee Kessler, secretary to the program's director. "We help choose the right major and career."

While UPS helps students reach their goals, University Counseling helps students decide what goals to follow, Kessler said.

Students can seek counseling at the center for help in personal problems, study skills and time management from psychologists, career counselors and counselor interns. The center offers group programs, a library, graduate school admission forms and tests such as the GRE, the MCAT and LSAT.

Appointments may be made by calling 962-2175 or by visiting the center in Nash Hall.

The Mental Health section is a specialized division of the Student Health Service. Its staff of mental health professionals provide such services as personal crisis management, stress management, counseling for couples (married and single) and short-term therapy. They discuss any problem that is causing an individual's concern.

The Mental Health section is on the second floor of the Student Health Service. Appointments can be made by calling 966-2281. All therapy is kept in strict confidence, and there is no cost for students who have paid student health fees.

The Student Consumer Action Union, a student-run service, offers consumer information and protection through a number of publications and counseling.

SCAU publishes The Southern Part of Heaven, a guide to housing in Chapel Hill and Carrboro; The Franklin Street Gourmet, a restaurant and bar guide and *C*A*S*H*, a guide to banking in Chapel Hill. SCAU also maintains a small library of consumer guides, which students are welcome to borrow or browse through.

Students who need advice can visit the SCAU office in Suite B of the Union or call 962-8313. Volunteers are always welcome.

The Human Sexuality Information and Counseling Service is staffed by professionally trained peers and provides counseling and referrals on any area of human sexuality. Throughout the year, HSICS sponsors speakers and programs designed to increase student awareness.

Students seeking advice can come by the office in Suite A of the Union or call 962-5505.
