

Union messenger hijacks plane

The Associated Press

BERLIN — An employee of the independent union Solidarity, armed with a grenade, hijacked a Polish airliner on a domestic flight Saturday and diverted it to a U.S. air base in West Berlin in the second such incident in five weeks.

The hijacker surrendered and freed the four crew members and 34 other passengers, including two Americans, Berlin police reported. They said two other Polish passengers later asked to remain in the West.

The hijacker of the Polish airliner was a Warsaw employee of Solidarity who said he was dissatisfied with life in Poland, police said Sunday.

Jerzy Dygas, 25, was arrested and charged with "endangering air transport" for the hijacking of a LOT airlines AN-24 plane.

Police said Dygas told them he was employed as a Solidarity messenger and wanted to defect to the West because he was unhappy with economic and political conditions in Poland.

But Pavel Niezodski, a Solidarity official in charge of the Warsaw chapter's information department, told The Associated Press, "I've never heard of this man and I know most of the messengers."

Police quoted Dygas as saying he had planned to hijack a plane flying from Hungary to Yugoslavia in 1979, but was arrested before he could carry out the operation and was placed under a 5-year foreign travel ban.

Despite a Polish request for his extradition, Dygas was handed over to West German authorities for prosecution. He faces a minimum five-year prison sentence if convicted.

The plane, hijacked on a flight from Wroclaw to Warsaw, returned to Poland about six hours later. Two passengers, both men aged 19 and 22, asked for political asylum and were allowed to remain in the West.

Polish television said Dygas smuggled the World War II grenade on board in a transistor radio. U.S. officials said the grenade could not have exploded because the detonator had been removed.

The plane landed at dusk at Tempelhof air base and immediately was surrounded by U.S. military police.

The two Americans were identified by a U.S. military spokesman as Walter Borowski and his sister Katherine Borowski, both of Linden, N.J. Officials said Miss Borowski was visiting her brother, a medical student in Warsaw. The other passengers were all Poles, according to the officials.

On July 21, a 21-year-old man, Bernard Pientka, hijacked a LOT airliner on a flight from Katowice to Gdansk and forced it to fly to West Germany. He was ordered held in a West Berlin jail pending trial on air piracy charges.

Since then, two other would-be hijackers have sought to divert LOT domestic flights, but were overpowered by security guards.

Saturday's hijacking was the fifth involving a Polish airliner to West Berlin since 1969.

Privacy dispute

Hinckley files suit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr., accused of trying to assassinate President Ronald Reagan, are asking a federal court to stop prison guards from reading Hinckley's personal papers during routine searches of his cell.

The request, filed with U.S. District Court here this week, indicated that Hinckley's lawyers may be worried about the guards reading something that would tip off the government to aspects of Hinckley's legal defense strategy.

Hinckley, charged with an assassination attempt against Reagan on March 30, was returned a week ago to confinement at the Marine base at Quantico, Va., after he underwent extensive psychiatric examination at the federal correctional institution at Butner, N.C.

It was at Butner, the lawyers said, that Hinckley discovered guards were reading his personal papers during twice-daily searches of his cell while the prisoner was absent. They said the readings were an unreasonable violation of Hinckley's right of privacy, and that they had no reason to expect the searches to stop at Quantico.

The defense lawyers said the government claimed the searches were intended to prevent Hinckley from committing "self-destructive acts," but was hard-pressed to show how reading Hinckley's personal papers would reduce the possibility of "a further attempt at suicide."

"Mr. Hinckley's interest in maintaining the privacy of his personal papers is, if anything, even more compelling than that of an ordinary citizen at this particular time," the lawyers said.

Convicted spy Boyce arrested Friday after two year escape from Campoc

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Convicted spy Christopher Boyce, who escaped from the Lompoc, Calif. federal prison nearly two years ago, was arrested Friday night at a restaurant, U.S. marshals said.

Marshals apprehended Boyce at the Pit Stop Restaurant in Port Angeles at 8:40 p.m. PDT with the aid of FBI agents and the Clallam County sheriff's office, said deputy marshal Jack Tait.

Boyce, 28, was serving a 40-year sentence for selling classified documents to the Soviets when he scaled the fence at Lompoc Correctional Institution Jan. 21, 1980 and disappeared into the rugged backcountry.

Investigators admitted being stymied as to how the son of a former FBI agent made his successful escape. An experienced falconer with intimate knowledge of the wild, Boyce became the object of an intense international search.

Authorities have had reports that he turned up in Africa, Alaska, and Mexico, where his boyhood friend, Andrew Daulton Lee, had made the Soviet contacts to deliver the classified materials Boyce took.

In Washington, William Hall, director of the U.S. marshal's service, confirmed Boyce's arrest.

Hall said a task force of deputy marshals, FBI agents and Border Patrol officers had the area under surveillance for more than two weeks. Boyce was taken to Seattle for further proceedings, he said.

FBI Director William Webster said the arrest followed "a sustained cooperative effort by several agencies."

Boyce was convicted in 1977 of selling highly classified information dealing with U.S. satellite surveillance systems from the TRW Inc. plant in Redondo Beach, Calif. where he was employed from mid 1974 until 1976 as a security clerk. The government contended the codes could have compromised the CIA's cryptographic communications system.

Microfilms of top-secret U.S. documents were found in Lee's pockets when he was arrested Jan. 6, 1977 outside the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City. Boyce was taken into custody in Riverside, Calif. 10 days later.

Lee, 29, a cabinet maker and drug dealer, was sentenced to life imprisonment in July 1977.

Boyce, of Palos Verdes in the Los Angeles area, maintained occasional telephone contact with New York Times reporter Robert Lindsey, who interviewed him in prison and wrote a book about the spy caper entitled "The Falcon and the Snowman."

He reportedly told Lindsey in one 1980 telephone conversation that he had patterned his flight on the movie "Escape from Alcatraz," which he had seen in prison.

He said he had made a paper mache dummy and left it in his bed to deceive guards and told Lindsey he crawled over two 10-foot high fences to escape.

After 19 months on the run, Boyce spent the weekend in a federal jail cell, awaiting an appearance today before a U.S. magistrate in Seattle.

"He was a very surprised young man," said Robert Christman, chief deputy for the U.S. Marshals Service in Seattle. "He had just come back from jogging. He was ... eating a hamburger, reading a book in his car."

"He is brilliant," said Sheriff Steve Kernes of Clallam County, where Boyce hid out. "He played the role very well. He must have looked around at how people dressed and talked, and then blended in."

Boyce told his new friends he opposed war and killing and championed women's rights.

Kernes said investigators suspected Boyce may have robbed banks to support himself. He said Boyce's absence from the Olympic Peninsula coincided with bank holdups in nearby states — which Kernes refused to name — "and perhaps in Washington state."

In Washington, D.C., FBI spokesman Roger Young said Sunday the bureau was investigating whether Boyce committed other crimes in Washington state to support himself.

"There are at least 16 unsolved bank robberies in the state of Washington," Young said. "We are not saying Boyce did them, but we're studying the bank security films and other evidence to see if there could be any linkup."

Boyce may have hoped to further his escape by air. He took flying lessons at Pearson Aircraft in Port Angeles and soloed a week ago, said Valerie Stenberg, the flying service's office manager.

He worked seven days a week studying both here and at home," said Art Manahan, chief Pearson instructor.

After his capture, Boyce reportedly told federal agents; "I would have had my private pilot's license in five days and then I would have gone."
