Clinics, fitness classes open to students, staff

One of the newest dimensions of UNC's Intramural-Recreational Sports program is the 22-sport Lifetime Leisure Activities Program, coordinated by Asst. IM-Rec Director Rob Frye.

Planned in conjunction with the Department of Physical Education in which IM-Rec Sports falls, this program of introductory clinics in activities one can use through life begins its second year.

Frye and Assoc. IM-Rec Director Mary Pomerantz organized the program last summer, encompassing ideas from the universities of Florida and Maryland, where Frye studied, and Pomerantz' Michigan State University. Last year's 11-sport program has been doubled this year.

The idea of the Lifetime Leisure program is to give the university community—students, faculty-staff members and families—exposure and introduction to and practice at skills that offer them exercise and positive leisure hobbies, Frye said. Most clinics are designed for the beginner, but the higher skilled participant can receive added instruction and organized practice time, he said.

Clinics offered this fall include golf, fly & bait casting, jogging, archery, squash, canoeing, badminton, weight training, social dance and cross-country skiing. Racquetball was the first clinic offered this semester Sept. 9. Next semester, Lifetime Leisure will offer bowling, backpacking and hiking, fencing, handball, self-defense, yoga for jogging, folk dance, bicycle maintenance, sailing, frisbee and tennis.

There is little or no charge for the clinics, depending on the activity, Frye said. Registration deadline is usually a week before the scheduled clinic. Clinic participants assemble in 304 Woollen Gym at 6 p.m. for organization purposes, move to the specific activity area.

Lifetime Leisure schedules for a fall and spring are available in the IM-Rec office, 203 Woollen Gym.

A new cousin of the Lifetime Leisure program is IM-Rec's "Use It or Lose It" fitness class. Scheduled to meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 6-8 p.m., the program opens Mon., Sept. 28 and runs throughout the semester. Classes will meet in 112 Fetzter, (Gym "C") and are open to students, faculty-staff members and families.

Deadline for this year's Century Club is tomorrow by 5 p.m. This UNC tradition fills up every year, so late entries will be limited, Frye said. Club distance totals are based on a September-August time table.

Play continued this week in tag football, team tennis and "Napoleon" basketball. Napoleon finals are slated for Monday in the men's competitive and women's competitive divisions. Archery competition began this week as did team table tennis and mixed doubles bowling.

The annual "Wimbledon" volleyball tournament has been delayed until Monday, according to tournament coordinator Roy Wahl. Schedules will be posted Friday, he said. In case of rain, Wimbledon games will be played in Fetzter.

Preliminaries for this year's track and field meet begin 4 p.m. Wed., Sept. 30 at Fetzter Track.

Gray pool hours

Kessing (outdoor) Pool is open through Sun., Sept. 27 from 1-5:30 p.m. ... Mon., Sept. 28 begins regular fall hours for Bowman Gray (indoor) pool ... Mon.-Thurs. 5:30-9:45 p.m.
