

Taiwanese youth mission to present martial art

By JO-LAN CHI
Special to the DTH

What is the real Chinese kung-fu? The flash movements in Bruce Lee's kung-fu movies? Or the soft, slow movements as Tai-chi Boxing?

People interested in the question may find their own answers Sunday night, Sept. 27.

A Youth Goodwill Mission from Taiwan, the Republic of China, will give a 90-minute show, "An Adventure in Chinese Songs and Dance," at Memorial Hall at 7:30 p.m.

In the first part of the program, the college students from Taiwan will demonstrate the internal form and external styles of the Chinese martial arts, including Tai-chi Boxing, Eagle Boxing, Tiger Boxing, etc. Through their performance, people can easily trace the origin of Chinese martial art to the imitation of the movements of birds and animals.

The other part of the program includes the variety of Chinese folk dance and music characterized with regional flavor.

The Mission consists of six male and eight female students, and a stage manager from more than 20 university and colleges in Taiwan. Their majors vary from dance, music to business administration, zoology and medicine.

This is the seventh Goodwill Mission, which is annually sponsored by Taiwan Television Company. This year, there are three groups visiting the Eastern, Western and Southern regions of the United States. The group going to the Southern region will visit universities in 14 states and Washington, D.C.

The members of the Mission were recommended by their universities to the China Ministry of Education and were selected according to their versatility, language ability and personality, said director Chih-Kang Wang, an associate professor of business administration at the National Taiwan University.

After two months of training in dance, kung-fu and language, 45 students were selected from all the trainees that compose the three groups, Wang said.

Recalling her experience through the training, Huey-fang Ju said, "It really required very, very hard working." Ju majors in home economics in Shih-chien College. She is a member of the South group.

Nevertheless, Ju said she joined the Mission because she wanted to see more and to know more about the world.

So far, the Mission has given three shows in Washington, D.C., and the State of Maryland. Wang said the audience response had been good.

At George Washington University, the audience crowded into the 1,500-seat auditorium. At the University of Maryland, more than 300 people were turned away at the door because the auditorium had already been filled with people, Wang said.

Members of the Chinese community in Chapel Hill and Carrboro were excited about the coming event. Yin-ping Lan, a second-year graduate student in early childhood education, said her first response to the news was a blend of surprise and happiness.

"It seemed that something new and different would come into the routine of my daily life," Lan said. "Of course I was excited. Although I'll also be excited when a famous symphony comes to Chapel Hill, it's quite different. For me, the Mission's visiting UNC is just like my own family coming to visit me."

There are about 200 Chinese in the Chapel Hill area; more than 40 are UNC students.

Last year, its performance in Raleigh attracted about 800 people. The Mission will also visit East Carolina University in October.

Register to vote for Nov. election for the record

Three days of voter registration for the Nov. 3 elections will be held next week in the Carolina Union.

The special registration will be from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. Tuesday, 3-9 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Thursday. Otherwise, voters may register at either the Chapel Hill Municipal Building or the Carrboro Town Hall through Oct. 5.

Registration at those locations will be from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and noon-8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

for the record

In a headline in the Spotlight ("Popular, though illegal, they perform nightly"), it was reported that street musicians were illegal. Police headquarters told one of the performers that playing and accepting money on the street was acceptable and that no license was required. However, the town clerk said if the music was above the decibel limit required by the new town noise ordinance, the musician may be in violation of that ordinance. The DTH regrets the error.

News in Brief

Aid to El Salvador turned down

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a defeat for President Reagan and the president of El Salvador, the Senate voted today to halt U.S. military aid to El Salvador unless that country protects human rights and meets other conditions.

The Senate, by a vote of 51-47, rejected an administration-backed amendment by Sens. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to turn the conditions merely into goals.

The conditions will halt U.S. military aid to El Salvador unless Reagan certifies to Congress in writing that El Salvador is protecting human rights, moving to control its security forces, implementing economic reforms, committing itself to free elections and willing to negotiate for peace.

Murderer author is captured

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — Jack Henry Abbott, the fugitive convict and author wanted in New York City for questioning in a fatal knifing, was captured Wednesday by a squad of 10 law officers, officials said.

"We weren't taking any chances," said Morgan City Detective Steve Clarke. "They wanted him pretty bad."

Clarke said Abbott was working as a roustabout at an oil field and was arrested without a struggle at his loading job. Abbott was jailed in Franklin, La., Clarke said.

Abbott, 37, is a convicted killer who was befriended by Pulitzer-prize winning author Norman Mailer. Mailer wrote the introduction to Abbott's prison memoir, "In the Belly of the Beast," which received rave reviews when it was published earlier this year.

Abbott had been a fugitive since July 18, when he fled a New York halfway house where he was finishing a 14-year sentence for killing another prison inmate. He was to have been paroled on Aug. 25, according to his literary agent, Scott Meredith.

Abbott was wanted by New York police for questioning in the fatal stabbing of Richard Adan, 22, a part-time waiter and aspiring actor at a restaurant in lower Manhattan.
