

Seat sought by Pasquini

By JOHN CONWAY
DTH Staff Writer

Frustrated by the unresponsiveness of town government, David A. Pasquini has announced his candidacy for the Chapel Hill Town Council.

Pasquini, a graduate of Purdue University and the UNC School of Public Health, said he was concerned about unbalanced representation in Chapel Hill town government.

"It appears that the present city council isn't real responsive to the needs of some of the citizens, especially a large number of citizens that pay real estate and personal property tax," Pasquini said.

Although an advocate of public housing, Pasquini was disappointed with the town's approval of a 16-duplex public housing project to be built in the Piney Mountain housing development, near Pasquini's North Forest Hills residence.

Alternative sites were not properly examined by the council, Pasquini said, and as a result, residents will be isolated in a densely populated area.

If elected, Pasquini said he would like to investigate the financial operations of the town.

"One thing I would like to do is review very closely the money that's coming in and the money that's going out," Pasquini said.

Pasquini said he thought recently annexed areas were paying for some services that they were not receiving. "I would just like to see basically where the money is going."

The new Chapel Hill zoning ordinance is inequitable, Pasquini said, because it is inconsistent. The ordinance allows a greater density of population per acre, causing an unbalanced situation in loop areas.

In the area of city services, Pasquini said there should possibly be a redistribution.

"Everybody always wants a little more for their end," he said, calling for a re-examination.

Foushee to run again

By KAREN HAYWOOD
DTH Staff Writer

Announcing Thursday he would seek a fourth term on the Carrboro Board of Aldermen, Braxton Foushee said the Carrboro Community Coalition "can continue to provide good government in Carrboro while the Association for a Better Carrboro can only promise."

Foushee said the buses, bikeways and new community park were evidence of the coalition's and the board's successes. Foushee said that if the ABC candidates were elected that transportation for students would become very expensive.

"They say they support bus transportation ... that means to them a self-supporting system," Foushee said.

Foushee said he would support the bus system at its current level.

The bus system needs to expand into the recently annexed Barrington Hills neighborhood, but the cost would be tremendous and the ridership would probably be low, he said.

In response to charges that Carrboro is not encouraging development, Foushee said the town had approved six projects in the past few months.

Carrboro is the only town of its size that has an economic development specialist, he said.

Foushee

Foushee also said that he did not believe the town had been involved in too much litigation, as ABC has charged.

"If you have a dispute with somebody, the place to settle it is in court," he said.

With regard to one suit, Foushee said the town and the Orange Water and Sewer Authority had reached an impasse, and they mutually agreed to settle it in court.

Foushee is on the board of directors of the North Carolina League of Cities. He is also on the Orange Water and Sewer Authority Board of Directors and has been president of the Carrboro Schools' Parent Teacher Association.

White seeks re-election

By KAREN HAYWOOD

Nancy White announced her intention Thursday to run for re-election on the Carrboro Board of Aldermen, saying that Carrboro needs to maintain "the improvements which the (Carrboro Community) Coalition has brought to town."

"We have made changes in which I am proud to have played a part," White said.

"The bus system works and has a sound financial basis. The bikeways are under construction. The new park opens this month. The green garbage cans have thwarted scavenging dogs and reduced litter along the streets," she said.

These changes are of particular interest to students, White said. But most of the improvements are of equal or more benefit to permanent residents.

White said the present board had been criticized for raising taxes. The implication is that should "our opponents be elected, they will lower taxes," she said. "My question is, what programs do they plan to eliminate?"

White said that since many of the leaders of the Association for a Better Carrboro spoke out against the bus system in the past, "it would be logical to assume that the bus system would be the first thing to go."

White

If that is not the case, now is the time to say so, she said.

In response to charges that Carrboro does not have an open government, White said that only 33 percent of the members of town boards and committees were coalition members, repeating what other coalition candidates have said.

"We view all residents of town as citizens of the town, whether or not they own real estate," she said.

Some of the members of ABC have problems with that, White added. White graduated from UNC-Greensboro and from the School of Library Science at UNC-CH. She works in Wilson Library as head of the Serials section of the Catalog Department.

Hospitals receive profits

Shriners hold benefit fish fry

By JEANNIE REYNOLDS
DTH Staff Writer

The Fall Shriners Fish Fry given by the Orange County Shrine Club is from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. today in the parking lot of University Mall.

Proceeds from the fish fry will go to aid crippled children in the 21 hospitals supported by the Shriners.

"Eighteen of the hospitals are orthopedic hospitals," Orange County Shiner James Jennings said. "The other three hospitals are burn centers for children who have been severely burned."

Jennings said that the only requirement for a child to receive aid from the Shriners was that the child's parents could not afford to give the child private treatment.

"We (the Shriners) pay the full cost for all of the treatment," he said. "And that includes transportation costs as well as motel costs for the parents if need be."

"It doesn't cost them a penny."

In addition to the 21 hospitals in the United States, Jennings said that there was a 22nd facility in Canada, supported by the Shriners. Donations had been used there also until Canada adopted a system of social medicine, Jennings said, in which the government takes care of all medical costs.

Since then, Shiner donations have gone to the aid of a pure research facility in Canada, Jennings said.

The nearest of the hospitals to Chapel Hill is in Greenville, SC.

Jennings said that public support in the past had been good and that town and corporate support for today's activities had been a great help.

"We've bought 2000 pounds of fish and we would love to have to order some more," he said.

And Jennings said that the fish would be "better than anything you've ever eaten."

The plates include flounder fillet, cole slaw, and hush puppies. The price is $3.50 per plate.

Lewis drops from Carrboro election

By KAREN HAYWOOD
DTH Staff Writer

Saying that the Carrboro Community Coalition needs "three united, strong candidates to shut down the threat by the Association for a Better Carrboro," Sonya Lewis withdrew from the Carrboro Board of Aldermen race Thursday.

"I originally announced my candidacy because I felt the appearance this summer of the Association for a Better Carrboro posed a serious threat to the continuation of the current level of services in Carrboro," she said.

She said she was concerned that if ABC came to power it would end bus service in Carrboro.

At the time of her decision, she said, the three incumbents (Braxton Foushee, Doug Sharer and Nancy White, who are in the coalition) had not decided whether to run for re-election.

Since they have announced their candidacy, "I feel they are the best standard-bearers for the issues which concern me," she said.

Lewis said she intended to support the incumbent aldermen and also Mayor Robert Drakeford for re-election.

Lewis said she was concerned that new voters would not realize that the leadership and candidates of the Association for a Better Carrboro opposed the Public Transportation Referendum in Carrboro just one year ago.

"These are the same people now telling students and other public transit users to vote for them," she said.

"The ABC people are wolves in sheep's clothing. I am going to be working very hard for the Carrboro Community Coalition to see that the wool is not pulled over the voters' eyes," she said.

Council to hear zoning requests

By MICHELLE CHRISTENBURY
DTH Staff Writer

At a public hearing Tuesday night, the Chapel Hill Town Council heard applicants' requests for a zoning map amendment to allow a new Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity house, and a request to allow Wendy's restaurant to construct a drive-in window.

The purpose of the public hearing was to give council members a legal basis to vote on these proposals at the next Town Council meeting Oct. 3.

Ron Merritt, a member of the alumni board of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, requested a zoning map amendment to allow construction of a new house on the Cameron Avenue site of the existing house which would sleep 44 men.

The fraternity presently owns two adjoining lots at the corner of Pittsboro Street and West Cameron Avenue. The Sig Ep house presently on the property houses 27 men. The fraternity is applying for a zoning map amendment from OI-1, as the property is now zoned, to OI-3, which designates property for highly intense use.

Merritt said the intensity of OI-3 zoning would not be unusual for the area. "Directly across Pittsboro Street is an area presently zoned OI-3, which includes the Carolina Inn. Within 300 feet of the property is the Granville Towers residence complex, with its highly intense use."

"Another advantage to the larger fraternity house would be a decrease in demand for rental housing in Chapel Hill," Merritt said.

The Chapel Hill Planning Board and staff recommended that the property be amended to an OI-2 classification instead of an OI-3 classification.

Chapel Hill Planning Director Mike Jennings said Wednesday, "In evaluation of the applicant's request, we felt that the OI-3 zone allowed a number of uses we didn't feel were compatible to the area which is in a transition between the intense uses of the Carolina Inn and the UNC campus."

"The OI-3 classification has no height requirements and makes no stipulations as to how close to the road someone can build. However, a OI-2 classification would be appropriate."

Also under consideration was a request for a special use permit modification to change what is now a walk-up window at Wendy's restaurant and make it a drive-in window. The restaurant is located on Scarlette Drive near U.S. 15-501. Attorney Doug Hargrave represented the owners in their application.

"The use is designed to maintain and promote the public health, safety and general welfare," Hargrave said. "There will be no parking conflict since the drive-in window traffic will be directed by lanes, islands and strips to separate pass-through-traffic from drive-in traffic. Under the present system, people park all over the lot and come from all angles to order at the pick-up window."

Hargrave said that the nature of the area was different from downtown Carrboro, where another Wendy's restaurant is located.

"There is a vast difference between this area and the Wendy's located downtown. We are in an area of high intensity auto use."

The Chapel Hill Planning Board recommended that the council grant the amendment to the special use permit with the following stipulations: Scarlette Drive should be widened, and a paved sidewalk should be provided along the front of the property.

Students' questions answered by Action Line

By LYNN EARLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Although the Action Line has suffered some problems from lack of publicity in the past, the service is now operating. Students can find answers to seemingly unanswerable questions through the service.

The Action Line number is 966-4084. A volunteer staff has information about practically any subject, and if they do not know the answer, they know who does, Chairman of Student Services Becky Walser said.

Questions about free flicks, tickets, addresses and dates of events are often addressed. Another common request is for information about sports events. "A lot of people want the number for Woollen Gym for the IM Program," Walser, a sophomore speech and communications major from Lexington, said.

Action Line was originally a campaign promise by J.B. Kelly, 1979-1980 student body president. Last year its role was increased to include telephone surveys to give the Student Government input from the students, 1980-1981 Student Body President Bob Saunders said. Surveys were conducted on textbooks, food service, student health, student aid and Chapel Thrill.

Symposium to be held

"Make That Move: A Symposium on Minorities in Communications" is scheduled for 11 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday in the upstairs lounge of Howell Hall.

The symposium, sponsored by the journalism school, will feature minority speakers from various mass media. Refreshments will also be served.

James Alexander of The Charlotte Observer, Rochelle Riley of The Greensboro Daily News and Janice Vaughn of WSOC radio in Charlotte are all scheduled to speak.

Even Though It's September Fall Parties Are Planned At The Inn

The Colonial Inn
Hillsborough, North Carolina
Since 1795

September may seem like a strange time to begin thinking of the dinners, receptions, and parties you plan to have at The Colonial Inn in the fall and during the holidays. Nevertheless, it's the smart thing to do. The Colonial Inn becomes a beehive of activity when the days get cooler. That's when historic Hillsborough is at its beautiful best, and the fun begins at the inn. If you're going to have a wedding reception, office gathering, fraternity or sorority party, or a big dinner party this fall, or during the holidays, do it at The Colonial Inn where every occasion is delightful. Dinner will be served here today beginning at 11:30 and lasting until 9 p.m. There's delicious southern food awaiting you, plus a invitation to venture out and explore the historically maintained little town of Hillsborough.
