UNC Symphony Orchestra holds first concert tonight

The UNC Symphony Orchestra, conducted by David Serrins, will give its first concert of the year at 8:15 p.m. today in Hill Hall Auditorium.

The pieces to be performed are quite varied in content. The opening work will be Debussy's quiet and programmatic "Prelude, Afternoon of a Faun."

The second work performed will be an all-string piece, Bartok's "Divertimento for String Orchestra."

The third piece will be Sibelius' "2nd Symphony," a work for a fairly large orchestra with full brass, woodwinds and tympani.

The UNC Symphony Orchestra is composed of undergraduate music-majors, students in other majors, a few graduate students and some townspeople brought in to fill the instrumental chairs not taken by students. The UNC Symphony Orchestra performs four concerts each school year, two each semester.
