Voter turnout and student participation were faulted by several of the incumbent candidates however, as contributing to their defeats.

"The students who were registered did vote," said Doug Sharer of the Coalition, "but only a small percentage of students did register." Braxton Foushee also said student support may have been lacking in the Carrboro race, saying his group would "have to do a better job of convincing students to register."

Steve Rose, a present board member who was not up for re-election and CCC member, disputed Caldwell's right to claim a mandate. "... With a 30 percent voter turnout I wouldn't consider this a mandate," Rose said. "Some faction of 30 percent of the people voted for the people who won. The biggest problem for the Coalition was that the students did not register to vote."

Sonya Lewis, coalition supporter and a former candidate who dropped out of the race earlier in the campaign agreed with Rose. "Their voters were more motivated than ours were," she said. "If we had motivated our voters, it definitely would have been a better campaign."

The winners said they were pleased with the campaign they ran, despite the sometimes heated charges and politics. Both factions had been criticized for running vicious campaigns, but the mood was strictly conciliatory at ABC headquarters Tuesday night.

"I think it has been a hard-fought campaign, obviously," Caldwell said. "It was a close race and those who are victors have earned every vote they got." Caldwell said he has high respect for the Coalition and its campaign, but was pleased his group was able to defeat the incumbent faction. "I think it's a new day in Carrboro to some extent politically, in that nothing is automatic anymore," he said.

Foushee placed much of the blame for the defeat of Coalition candidates on a controversial endorsement by the South Orange Black Caucus, which endorsed four candidates (Sharer, Nancy White, Foushee and Caldwell) for the three open seats on the board.

"They didn't want to bite the bullet," Foushee said of the endorsement, adding that it cost Coalition members re-election. "They (the Caucus) felt they had to support him (Caldwell) because he was black."

Foushee disputed the demise of the Coalition, however, and said he would run again for election in two years if he had Coalition support. "This is not the first time a political group has lost an election. We're not going to run and hide."

Nancy White also said she would remain active in Carrboro politics. "I think we fought an honorable, truthful campaign. I can live with myself comfortably," she said. "I expect to remain active in Carrboro politics and in the Coalition actions."

Both ABC and Coalition members and supporters expressed concern about the problems facing bus service in Carrboro. "The Coalition made a big deal out of the busing issue in the campus forum," Caldwell said. "I felt I explained my reasoning on that matter thoroughly to the people, as the vote would indicate."

Ernie Patterson, a board member not up for re-election, urged the new aldermen to continue funding the bus service. "I think it's important that every candidate who won agrees to commit themselves toward funding an expanded bus service and I will work with them toward this and for the betterment of Carrboro," she said.

Concern also was expressed by Doug Sharer, who commented that it was unfortunate the issues were not dealt with "squarely and head-on."

"It will be interesting to see if the new board can deal with double-digit inflation and still maintain services," Sharer said.

The new aldermen will join present members Rose, Patterson and John Boone when they take office in January.

"I hope (the new aldermen) vote the logical way on the issues," Drakeford said, "whatever they may be, and do nothing that is politically self-serving."

Messer said he would be a watchful citizen.

"I feel that the ABC ticket has struck a philosophical chord in the community in that I think they will be very demanding of the board," he said. "I will be demanding of the board."

Messer said the results were a logical outgrowth of the campaign.

"We saw this coming and the results were not unpredictable."

want total accountability from the council," she said. "Obviously the people think that it is important to keep taxes low and justify any expenditure."

Thorpe and other candidates said their candidacy was hurt by the decision by The Daily Tar Heel not to make any endorsements in the race.

"Something strange was going on there when they've been endorsing for so many years and they don't this year," Thorpe said. "Maybe it was because Marilyn Boulton was running." Boulton is the wife of UNC Dean of Student Affairs Donald Boulton.

DTH editor Jim Hummel said the candidacy of Boulton did not influence the decision not to make endorsements.

With the results final, speculation shifted to the possible impact of two new members on the council. Pasquini said he hoped the council would be more responsive to the town's needs.

"Representation in government was the issue I felt most strongly about," he said. "It has been hard sometime to communicate with the town government. The representatives at times seemed to be reacting on how they felt rather than how the town felt."

Boulton said the defeat of two incumbents showed some change would be necessary. "Since Thorpe and Herzenberg were displaced it showed that the voters were unhappy," Boulton said. "I assure the voters that we have addressed the issues and understand the financial status of the town. We do need to change our attitude on the council. The new people will certainly help us."

The potentially divisive issue of the proposed public housing market in Piney Mountain did not seem to affect the results. The project brought opposition from some Piney Mountain residents, and this hurt Thorpe and Herzenberg who favored it. But Kawalec, who also favored the project, said the issue was not important. "Public housing was obviously not the most important issue in people's minds," she said.

The losers expressed no regrets about their defeat. "I feel good about the campaign," Thorpe said. "It's the best campaign I could have put on. I guess the people wanted a change, or at least half a change."

Al Mebane came in seventh place with 1,680 and Lightning Brown was in eighth place with 1,412 votes. William Lindsay came in ninth, and student candidate Doug Ruff, a UNC student, was tenth.

"I accomplished several things in my campaign," Brown said. "Three tenant organizations were formed and we pushed hard to get condominium conversion under control."

News in Brief

Prisoners release last hostages

GRATERFORD, Pa. (AP) — Inmates who held six state prison workers hostage for five days settled into new cells in a federal prison Tuesday as officials began trying to find out how they got guns into Pennsylvania's largest maximum-security facility.

The seven inmates, including alleged ringleader Joseph "Jo-Jo" Bowen, a three-time killer, were taken by bus to the federal prison at Lewisburg on Monday night.

Two hours earlier, the last of dozens of people taken hostage after an aborted escape attempt last Wednesday were released unharmed.

Officers began a search of all cells and work areas at the state Correctional Institution at Graterford on Tuesday. Correction Bureau spokesman Ken Robinson said he was not sure how long the search would take, but inmates would remain locked in their cells until it was done.

Reagan and Hussein end talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan, concerned about Jordan's interest in buying Soviet arms, concluded two days of talks with King Hussein on Tuesday by saying the Middle East kingdom's security "is a matter of historic and enduring concern to the United States."

Publicly, the two leaders glossed over their differences on methods of pursuing peace in the region, and addressed merely their common goal of attaining Middle East peace.

As Hussein's limousine pulled away down a driveway lined with servicemen bearing Jordanian and American flags, Reagan was asked whether the king persuaded him to support a Saudi Arabian peace plan.

"No," Reagan replied. "We just found we agreed on many things."

Swedes still holding Soviet sub

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish officials said Tuesday their interrogation of the skipper of a stranded Soviet submarine could be a lengthy one because they had not received a satisfactory reason for its presence in Swedish territorial waters.

The interrogation went into its second day Tuesday with a 45-minute session aboard the submarine, which Sweden maintains was equipped as a spy vessel.

Swedish navy officials indicated after the session that the sub's captain, Lt. Cmdr. Pyotr Gushin, had not wavered from his explanation that an unfortunate "mistake in navigation due to faulty equipment and fog" brought his vessel close to the Karlskrona naval base where it ran aground one week ago.

Strike crisis continues in Poland

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa announced he would meet with Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski and Archbishop Jozef Glemp today, presumably to seek ways out of Poland's labor crisis.

Walesa made the announcement Tuesday to a meeting of Solidarity's Country Commission, the union's national leadership executive. Moderates at the meeting called for an end to wildcat strikes idling 160,000 workers across Poland, but militants said the strikes would continue.

Walesa threatened, as he has several times previously, to resign if the delegates do not agree that the strikes must end.

Gators spark concern in Israel

TIBERIAS, Israel (AP) — Florida alligators are settling into their new home near the Sea of Galilee after a chilly welcome from some Israelis who feared the creatures might attack sunbathers and religious pilgrims.

The 120 alligators seem to be thriving so well in the hot, humid Yarmuk River gorge that some of them have grown four inches in three months — triple their normal growth rate.

Shlomi Ranan, an enterprising young kibbutznik, has brought the beasts to the Holy Land to help populate a tropical park he is creating on the Yarmuk six miles east of the Sea of Galilee.

But some nature specialists have voiced the fear that alligators might escape into the Sea of Galilee and munch on sunbathers and Christian pilgrims who baptize themselves in the lake.

Haig fears plot against him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. believes a top White House aide is "fanning a guerrilla campaign" to force him from office, the State Department's chief spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman, Dean Fischer, declined to identify the White House aide, but it is known that Haig believes Richard V. Allen, Reagan's national security adviser, is trying to discredit him.

Fischer quoted Haig as saying the campaign against him had been going on for nine months, or ever since he became secretary of state. Haig finds the situation "just mind-boggling," Fischer said.

Come one come all.
