

Downtown construction nearing end

Remodeling and construction of office and business space at the intersection of Franklin and Columbia Streets in Chapel Hill is nearing completion, architect Josh Gurlitz said.

"Although I can't give a definite date for completion, construction should be completed soon," Gurlitz said. "We are presently in the drying-in stage, putting sheet rock up and so forth, upstairs."

Several old and new businesses will operate on the ground level of the renovated building.

Logos Bookstore, a business which operated on the corner before construction, will reopen with twice as much space, Gurlitz said.

Other businesses that will open on the lower level are Copytron Copy Center and Mr. Gatti's, a restaurant.

Copytron Copy Center, with a Columbia Street entrance, is already open for business.

Mr. Gatti's, a pizza franchise from the southwest which should open next week, appears to be a promising business, Gurlitz said.

"I've been inside several times and Mr. Gatti's looks like it's going to be a suc-

The upstairs will consist primarily of office space, Gurlitz said. He said a legal firm, a property management firm, Logos, Pizza Transit Authority and Spanky's Restaurant and Bar will have offices in the building.

Council approves bus uniforms

By MICHELLE CHRISTENBURY
DTH Staff Writer

The Chapel Hill Town Council voted 6-3 Wednesday night to proceed with the purchase of bus driver uniforms for Chapel Hill Transit.

Council members Joe Straley, Bill Thorpe and Joe Herzberg voted against the motion.

The Chapel Hill Transportation Board had recommended to the council on Sept. 28 not to appropriate the $11,000 previously allocated for the uniforms. At that time, the council referred the issue to interim town manager Ron Secrist for study.

The controversy arose from opposition by bus drivers and townspeople to the Transportation Department's efforts to purchase the uniforms for its drivers. In their effort against the uniforms, Chapel Hill bus driver Phil Cohen and a committee of concerned drivers organized a petition drive among passengers and drivers.

At the Town Council meeting Wednesday, Cohen petitioned the council to postpone making a final decision on the issue and to perhaps bring the matter before a public hearing.

"The argument that the new uniforms will be necessary to enhance the image of the transit system is a subjective one," Cohen said. "But the other argument is an objective one. The 1,200 passenger signatures that were gathered in a rather short period of time showed that the majority of the passengers believed the uniforms would be a frivolous expenditure."

Loewenthal said that two alternatives to uniforms had previously been tried. "The Transportation Department issued bus driver name tags in the past," she said. "But drivers frequently lost or forgot to wear them."

"The implementation of a dress code had been considered, but it was anticipated to be difficult to administer and could present a financial burden on some employees."

Loewenthal said that the style of the uniforms had not been decided, and the bus drivers could be involved in the selection.

Terry Lathrop, chairman of the Transportation Board, said the board did not object to the uniforms, but that if the council was considering deleting the expenditure from the budget, the board could find other priorities for the money.

"I don't think the board felt strongly about the matter one way or another," Lathrop said.

In other action, recommendations on future space needs of the Chapel Hill Public Library were presented to the council.

Tobin Savage of the Library Board of Trustees said that by the year 2000, the library would need more than twice the space that was now available, based on city population estimates.

The board of trustees recommended that a 16,000-square-foot main library be built along a main thoroughfare near the growth area of town, and that the existing library on East Franklin Street be turned into a branch of the main library.

The council voted unanimously to refer the issue to the Town Manager for making a preliminary report.

On another issue, the council voted 7-2 to lower the rent charged the Orange County Women's Center for its interim use of the old town police building and to eliminate 15 free parking spaces from the agreement.

The council originally voted that the building be rented at $2 per square foot, but the Women's Center was unable to meet that cost.

The facility is to be used by both the Dispute Settlement Center and the Women's Center. The Women's Center, assigned to a larger room, would be required to pay more rent.

Straley moved to lower the rent, because "both organizations are approximately the same size and they could interchangeably use the same space. There is no good argument for making one group pay more."

The Council also made appointments and nominations to the transportation and planning boards.

The Council voted 8-1 to appoint John Thomas to serve on the Transportation Board.

Council member Jonathan Howes placed the names of Mae McLendon and Johnnie Leon Peace Sr. in nomination to the planning board. Appointments to that board will be made Nov. 23.

Banks to install campus machines

By MARK SCHOEN
DTH Staff Writer

Instant cash will be easier for students to get when four area banks install teller machines on campus in December.

First Union, Wachovia, North Carolina National and Central Carolina banks will install automatic 24-hour teller machines in a structure now under construction adjacent to the east wall of the Daniels Student Stores Building, said Tom Hunt, an administrative assistant with the UNC Physical Plant.

Costs for construction of the $40,000 building will be shared by the four banks, said Tom Shumate, a consulting architect with the UNC Planning Office.

"The work is being done by the physical plant in accordance with the banks involved," he said Tuesday. "Once it is completed, the banks will share equally on the lease, rent and utilities."

The design for the facility was approved by the faculty Building and Grounds Committee and the Board of Trustees, Shumate said.

Central Carolina Bank decided to install a machine in the structure as a convenience for students and because three other banks were doing it, said Dale Poole, a spokesman for the bank.

"The University has agreed to let us put one in," he said. "Primarily, the competition is why we're doing it. The students give us a lot of business and we're looking to make it more convenient."

Security will not be any more of a problem for the campus machine than for other machines the bank operates, he said. "The machine is well protected by alarms and vaults," Poole said. "We don't anticipate any problems."

Customer convenience was cited as the reason for NCNB's decision to install a machine on campus.

"The ones we have now are at capacity," said James F. Walters, branch administrator for NCNB. "Since we have a large number of student customers, we felt we could install one. It's to provide better customer service."

Walters said he felt security would not be difficult.

"We worked with the campus security people and the builders to work out security problems," he said. "I don't see any more problems than what we have now with our branches."

UNC Republicans push Polish petition

By SUZETTE ROACH
DTH Staff Writer

The UNC College Republicans are beginning their final push this week to secure 1,500 signatures on a petition in support of the Polish people and their reform-minded leaders, said Steve Long, chairman of the UNC College Republicans, at a press conference Thursday.

The drive is part of a national effort that has been going on for three weeks by College Republicans chapters around the country to show support "for the people of Poland in their struggle to retain their inalienable rights," Long said.

The national goal is 1 million names, said Lori Glenn, campus coordinator of the petition drive. She said 500 names already had been collected at UNC by club members' canvassing and at a table set up in the Pit.

Originally the group had planned on presenting the petitions to Lech Walsea, leader of the Solidarity union movement, on his trip to Washington, but the trip was cancelled because of unrest in Poland. Republicans now plan to fly the petitions to Poland.

Support for the petition has been good throughout the state, said Elizabeth Arthur, administrative vice chairperson for the state College Republicans. "It's been well taken by the student body and community. People of all persuasions have signed it," she said.

Long stressed the importance of not taking freedom for granted and of supporting other peoples in their efforts to preserve basic human rights. "There is a clear-cut threat in Poland to freedom," he said. "It's a good example of what communism takes from people."

Long said the College Republicans were sponsoring the petition because they recognized the importance of showing support and encouragement for Poland's leaders. In a prepared statement, he said, "The deputy Chairman of Solidarity recently said, 'It is very important that small, courageous groups of people know they are not alone.' That, in essence, is why we are sponsoring this petition."

The petition drive ends Nov. 12.

Appalachian skiing trip to count for credit

By LAURIE BRADSHAW
DTH Staff Writer

Over Christmas break about 100 students will have an opportunity to snow ski in the Appalachian mountains for 1 credit hour.

A snow skiing course will be offered January 3-8 in Boone, N.C., at Appalachian Ski Mountain. The mandatory registration meeting for students interested is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday in 109 Fetzer Gym.

The course is designed primarily for beginners. "This is an excellent opportunity for someone to learn to ski, at a low cost and with expert instructors," said coordinator Marybell Avery.

The instructors are from French-Swiss Ski College, a group based at Appalachian Ski Mountain. Morning instruction will begin at 9 and afternoons will be spent in clinics or practice sessions.

The cost of the course and trip will be $145, excluding meals and transportation, Avery said. The cost does include five sessions of instruction, the course manual, equipment (books, skis, poles), slope and lift fees and lodging for five nights.

The course will have a written and skills test, Avery said, probably to be held the fourth day of class.

The course can be taken pass-fail, but it will not serve as a second physical education course if a person is currently enrolled in a course, because skiing is considered a fall semester course, Avery said.

She also said the course would be very concentrated. "But that's a good way to learn to ski."

Though provisions will be made for intermediate skiers, Avery said the Appalachian Mountain was a good place to learn, but advanced skiers might be bored there.

She said the idea for a snow skiing course had grown out of the annual IM trip. "Of course, some schools like Appalachian and State already offer these courses for credit."

At Wednesday's meeting, students must pay a $35 non-refundable fee, preferably in the form of a check. "So this also represents the deadline for course registration," Avery said.

Job interviews to be held

The following employers and graduate school representatives will be on campus to discuss job opportunities and academic programs on the date indicated. Students can sign up for appointments with these representatives eight days ahead of the visit in the University Placement Services, 211 Hanes Hall. A resume is necessary at the time a student signs up for an interview. This is put in the folder accompanying the sign-up sheet.
