Northwestern starts building teller machine

By ALAN MARKS DTH Staff Writer

Students who bank at Northwestern on East Franklin Street will soon be able to get cash Saturday nights, Sunday afternoons or even at 3 in the morning.

Construction is under way to install an automatic teller machine there that will offer services like those of the other area banks.

"The teller machine will be able to access a few more accounts than, say, Wachovia Teller II or NCNB 24 due to a later start in technology," said Brad Brafford, city branch administrator of Northwestern Bank.

"Where other machines handle basically four accounts (per person), ours will be able to access up to 16 accounts (per person)," he said.

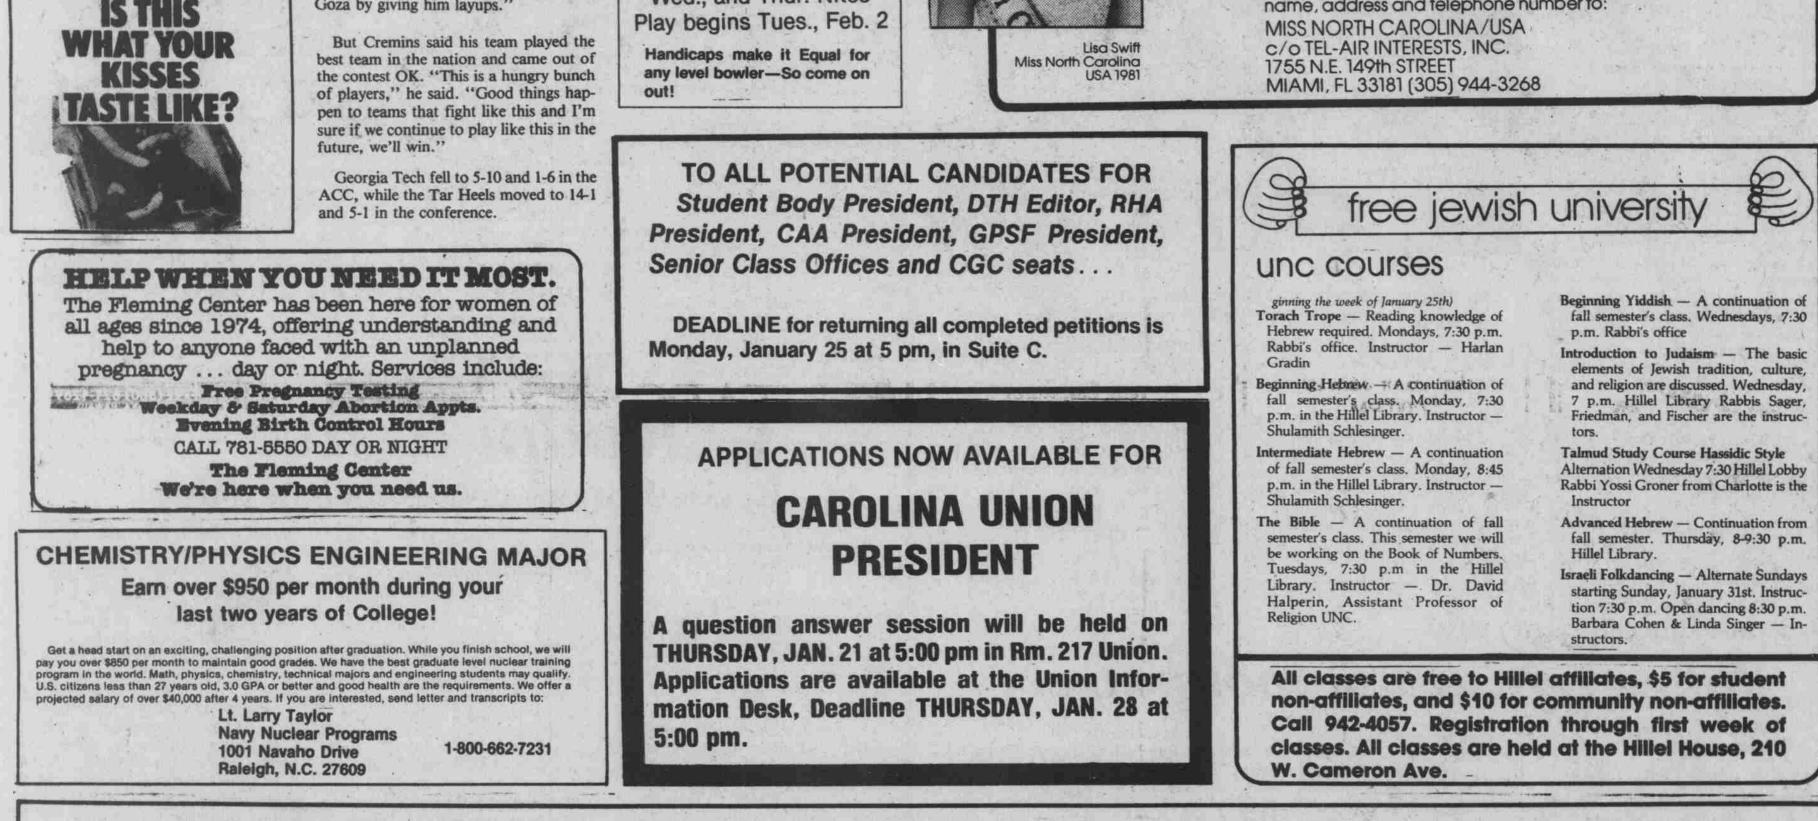

The 16 accounts will include four checking, four savings, four credit card and four loan accounts. The ability to handle more accounts is a result of advances in microelectronics, Brafford said.

"The teller machine is being installed to obviously compete and provide a service to our customers that we have not had," he said.

Brafford said construction should be completed by the end of February, but added that the bank's front entrance would be re-opened in about two weeks.

It will take 30 days to tie the machine into the bank's computers. The bank plans to issue cards and have the machine in full operation by April 1, he said.

Because of the cost of each machine, the Franklin Street location is the only local Northwestern branch now installing a teller machine. Brafford said banking machines cost from $50,000 to $100,000.

Science magazine 'Alchemist' on sale By PAM DUNCAN

The Alchemist, Carolina's only scienceoriented magazine, will go on sale for $1.50 per copy today in the Bull's Head Bookshop and the Carolina Union.

DTH Staff Writer

The Alchemist, published each semester, provides non-technical science articles, science fiction, poetry and graphics. "The Alchemist is not exclusively a magazine of science, but a magazine about science," Editor Danny Reid said recently.

Although The Alchemist's founder, former Carolina student Nigel Fleming, published the first issue in fall 1976, only about five issues have been published since then. Reid cited copyright and printing problems as the main reasons for The Alchemist's irregular publication.

Reid said that The Alchemist had been rather loosely and informally run so far, but added, "This is the year we'll probably try to prove ourselves. I hope this issue and the spring issue will gather a fairly large amount of interest from peo-

game From page 1

Although the game was not a blowout, it was never really in doubt either, as the inside All-America combo of Worthy and Perkins controlled the game offensively and defensively. The two had eight rebounds, 42 points and six steals.

Steppe agreed ... sort of.

"Worthy and Perkins are the two best forwards in the country," he said. "We tore them up, moved the ball around and stuck it in the hole."

Smith agreed ... sort of. "We should have played the zone defense more," he said. "The second half we fell apart. We even made a hero out of Goza by giving him layups."

ple who are wondering about the magazine."

Reid said he would like to see the magzine directed more to the typical student at Carolina than to just the science major. "The Alchemist is designed to bridge the gap between students of business and humanities and students in the various fields of science."

He said the articles in The Alchemist were written to entertain and illuminate both the general, non-technically trained reader and the reader familiar with the scientific background of the material.

Discussed in this issue of The Alchemist are occupational cancer in the United States, aquaculture and the use of algae and neutrinos in the field of physics and astronomy. Also included are two pieces of science fiction and a review of several science-related magazines that have come out in the past year.

Boston crash under investigation

BOSTON (AP) - Federal investigators examined a partially submerged World Airways DC-10 and an icy stretch of runway Sunday to learn why the jumbo jet with 208 people aboard slid into Boston Harbor and broke open.

"Weather conditions and the airport's decision to operate is a key area we'll be looking at," said Patricia Goldman, who led a team of 10 members of the National Transportation Safety Board, which inspected the scene of the Saturday night accident at Logal International Airport.

The 196 passengers and 12 crew members slid down emergency chutes and scrambled through waist-deep icy ocean water after Flight 30, from Oakland, Calif., and Newark, N.J., skidded off the end of a 10,081-foot runway while landing in a light rain about 7:30 p.m.

The cockpit of the plane broke off, and water surged through the cabin. At least 38 people were injured, none seriously.

Haig ready to chide Gromyko

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Sunday he would express to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko "the outrage of the American people" over the military crackdown in Poland.

The meeting Tuesday between the two ministers will be the first high-level U.S.-Soviet talks since martial law was declared in Poland on Dec. 13.

Haig's plane arrived Sunday night after more than 6,000 peace demonstrators rallied at the United Nations office where the talks will take place. Some shouted, "Soviet peace threatens peace!" and others carried banners condemning U.S. intervention in Central America.
