'Angel Street,' PRC's latest offers thrills

By JEFF GROVE DTH Staff Writer

Something odd is going on in the Manninghams' home. All is well with the young couple, living in a once fashionable London district in 1880 ... until Mrs. Manningham begins acting strangely. Enter Inspector Rough of Scotland Yard with news of danger lurking in the house.

A Victorian mystery novel? The newest installment of Masterpiece Theatre? No, it's Angel Street, the latest offering of the Playmakers Repertory Company, being presented on campus Jan. 27 through Feb. 14. The 1939 thriller by Patrick Hamilton, which racked up 1,295 performances on Broadway, is the first whodunit PRC has produced.

"Angel Street is very theatrical and truly a thriller," PRC Artistic Director David Rotenburg said. "The play is set in Victorian London and no one can commit murder as well as the British," Rotenburg said of the special appeal of the show. "There's something mysterious and sinister about all those levels of politeness and layers of clothing."

As for producing the play in the recently renovated Playmakers Theatre, Rotenberg said, "If there was ever a play

'Angel Street' characters discuss the plot's strange and sinister events ...the whodunit is being presented by Playmakers Repertory Company that Playmakers Theatre was designed to hold, it's this one. When you're inside, you can almost hear the clop, clop, clop of horse-drawn carriages on cobblestone pavements. What better setting is there for a murder?"

Rotenberg feels that the play is about impersonation. Gregory Boyd, PRC's Associate Artistic Director and the director of Angel Street, said, "The play is perfectly written. It keeps engaging us and shifting our sympathy. Every time a character makes a new entrance, we have learned so much during his absence that our attitude toward him has completely changed."

Angel Street features performances by UNC Dramatic Art professor Patricia Barnett and graduate student Emile Jean Trimble.

The play will be presented nightly except Monday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. The opening night curtain will be at 7:30 due to a reception following the show. Tickets are $7 for all performances except Friday and Saturday, when admission is $9. Tickets for a preview on Jan. 27 are $4.50. UNC student discounts are available at the door. For reservations or more information, call the box office in Graham Memorial at 962-1121.

Environmental law project publishes guide

The Environmental Law Project, a group of UNC law students, has published a guide to government agencies and citizen groups in North Carolina concerned with environmental issues.

The 1981 Environmentalist Guide contains the addresses, contact persons, publications and other information pertaining to each agency and group. About 200 copies have been sold so far in North Carolina, and libraries around the state will be contacted to determine their interest in the publication.

"In 1979, a group of law students at the University was given an opportunity to learn about environmental law," Project Chairman Daniel Read said. "We don't have a clinic (for environmental law study) like some other universities have, so we had to form our own organization."

Read said the project was involved in many areas of activities, such as research for lawyers. "We are concerned with looking into the fairness of utility rates, and we're involved in regulations concerning pesticides and hazardous waste," Read said. "There are about 20 to 30 law students in the project, many of them with experience in environmental law," said Read. "It's mostly volunteer."

The guides cost $3.50 per copy and are available at the UNC School of Law.

Carrboro board rejects ABC zoning change

By DEAN LOWMAN DTH Staff Writer

The Carrboro Planning Board voted Thursday night to recommend rejecting a proposed zoning change that would have allowed an Acholic Beverage Control store to be built on West Main Street.

In a 4-3 vote, the board decided to reject the request by Howard and Peggy Hearn on the grounds that the ABC store would be unsuitable in a neighborhood business zone, the present classification of the proposed location.

The recommendation will be presented to the Carrboro Board of Aldermen at a public hearing at their Feb. 9 meeting. The board will make the final decision whether to approve the request.

In other business, the planning board postponed action on joining a planning committee with Chapel Hill, Orange County and the Orange Water and Sewer Authority.

ater and Sewer Authority.

By joining the committee, the board would be informed of any proposed development in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area through a courtesy review procedure in which each member would inform the others of planned development.

"This would discourage any leapfrog development to a point two miles outside the city limits that would cause OWASA, for example, to have to suddenly run water lines to a certain area," said Don Meserve, a planner in the Carrboro Planning Department.

"The whole thing is a basic agreement over land use planning in the southern Orange County area," he said.

The board also received copies of their annual report which summarized all the cases reviewed and all planning issues dealt with by the board during 1981.

"This allows the board to look back and review how it was both involved in long-term planning and immediate issues during the past year," Meserve

UNC representation discussed at meeting

By DAVID CURRAN

The UNC Association of Student Governments discussed the possibility of student representation on the Board of Governors Saturday at a meeting in the Carolina Union.

Led by UNC and UNCASG President Scott Norberg, the association is composed of representatives from the 16 UNC schools who meet throughout the year to discuss and take action on various issues affecting students in North Carolina.

Norberg and several others from the UNCASG will meet shortly to discuss various issues with an academic committee appointed by the Board of Governors, which is responsible for the final decision on fee increases, tenure and faculty appointments.

The Board of Governors will then meet to discuss the issue of student representation on the board.

"There are a number of members from dents throughout the entire UNC system.

In other action, the UNCASG also agreed to oppose Southern Bell's proposed rate hike and is forwarding their resolutions to the State Utility Commission, Norberg said.

hurt them."

"We feel any rate hike will be detrimental to students," said Yocum. "Even though our (NCSU) phone rates will not directly be affected because we have a different phone system, our room rent rates would increase because of the phone rate increases."

The financial aid cuts being considered in the Senate were strongly opposed by the UNCASG, with most schools agreeing that any cuts will be difficult for students.
