

Kiki Dee's latest has soft tunes

By CHRISTINE MANUEL
DTH Staff Writer

Old pop stars never die; they just change record labels.

Perfect Timing, Kiki Dee's first album for RCA, displays the smooth style that made the British artist popular in the 1970s. Dee is best known for her dynamic version of "I've Got the Music in Me" and her duet with Elton John, "Don't Go Breaking My Heart," that reached No. 1 on the charts of Britain and the United States in 1976.

John again appears with her on Perfect Timing in another duet, "Loving You is Sweeter Than Ever." Written by Stevie Wonder and Ivy Hunter, the track reflects the influence of Dee's early Motown years, when she became the first British musician signed by the Detroit label. "Loving You," a soft ballad, is smoother than "Don't Go Breaking My Heart," and John's talent again adds much to the duet.

The title track, an upbeat electric cut, is Dee's intricate attempt at new wave with its use of synthesizers and distorted sounds.

"You Are My Home in This World" is a melodic piano piece whose easy-going style and lyrics best represent Dee's music.

*And now I feel the soft touch of the breeze,
I hear the sighing of the seas;
And though the beauty of this earth
Means much to me, of greatest worth
There's you.*

The album's producer, Pip Williams, provides all the guitar work. Williams brings Dee's talents together with Bob Jenkins' strong through sometimes repetitive drums, Bias Boshell's keyboards and Gary Twigg's bass. Dee provides most of the background vocals, and Patrick Moras, formerly of Yes and now of the Moody Blues, plays clavichord on "Another Break."

Kiki Dee's "Perfect Timing" displays the smooth style of the 1970s ... this album is the British native's seventh release

Dee, whose life has been music since she was 14, has toured with Elton John, Steely Dan and the Beach Boys. Now with the release of her seventh album, Dee has returned to the American music scene after a three-year stay in her native

England. Nothing is strikingly new about Perfect Timing; Dee seems well-settled in her pop style. It is easy to the ear with nothing overpowering — just sweet, soft ballads and upbeat tunes for a quiet mood.

Stookey's music testifies to his faith

By NORMAN CANNADA
DTH Staff Writer

Noel Paul Stookey is a musician who believes that one's music should reflect one's lifestyle.

As a member of the musical group Peter, Paul and Mary in the 1960s, Stookey wrote songs that related his personal experiences. Although his music now has a different message, it still reflects his life.

"If you were to line up every song that I've written end to end, you could get a good idea of what my life has been like," Stookey said in a recent telephone interview. "That shows you how closely my music is tied to my lifestyle."

One major change in Stookey's life that can be easily identified in his music is his conversion in 1968 to Christianity.

"A young boy, probably 10 years younger than me came backstage after a concert in Texas," Stookey said. "He said he felt he had been called by God to tell me what Christ had done in his life. I knew that there was something missing in my life, but I didn't know what it was until he showed me."

Although the message Stookey now presents to his audience is somewhat different, he said the style of music was much as it was in the early days of Peter, Paul and Mary.

"The music of Peter, Paul and Mary was not popular music by design, but in the way that it was accepted by the public. My style is much the same folk style that it always has been," Stookey said.

There is a difference, though, in the music Stookey is now performing with The Bodyworks Band.

"The focal point is more specific. Peter, Paul and Mary sought to encourage good through music, but we were from three different backgrounds. My music with The Bodyworks Band is more specific in that not only do we encourage good, but also try to show how you can gain strength and have a purpose in life through Jesus Christ."

"I guess I have always been amazed that someone could do something they loved and be thought of as extraordinary. I sort of felt that I was taking advantage of a situation. It was embarrassing. People didn't understand that this was just what I did."

Stookey also said he didn't base his view of the success of the group on how many records were sold.

"Folk music stays alive through the years. Success is determined by how many people sing your songs through the years, not by what you sell."

The group is now touring together again after breaking up in the early 1970s. They recorded a Reunion album last year.

"I think each of us had to be more forgiving and understanding of other people's needs," Stookey said.

The popularity of Peter, Paul and Mary throughout the years is an asset to Stookey's ministry, but he said he did not rely on that popularity.

"It gives an advantage to the promoter to help him put bodies in the audience. Stookey said. "But if it were just a hype, I think the people would figure that out, and they wouldn't come anymore."

Stookey currently averages 30 shows a year with The Bodyworks Band, which will be in UNC's Memorial Hall this Friday at 8 p.m. Unlike other Christian musicians, Stookey spends little of the concert time speaking to the audience. "My testimony is in my music."

WHAT AM I?

So small and yet so strong
Life is never helter skelter,
When I travel, the pace seems long
Yet I never lack a shelter.
