Spaulding Pro handball opens today in Fetzer

Basketball is finishing up its third week of regular season play today in Woollen as twelve of the nation's top handball professionals display their talents in Fetzer to end this week's IM-Rec activities.

Next week begins with the second annual Valentine's Day Couples Competition, moved back two hours (now 3:6 p.m.) because of the UNC/Georgia game, in Hilton Indoor Track (in Can). This year's competition will feature all new events according to coordinator Lainie Kooima.

The 1982 events, in order of progression, are "fowl play," "Lhapsody in two," "heading for home," "coed bundling," "lover's leap," "communal sacks," "dueling for dollies" and the infamous obstacle course. "To find out what all of events mean, you'll have to enter the competition," Kooima said.

Points will be given in order of finishing in each event, and the winner at the end of the day will receive official IM-Rec champion T-shirts and other prizes, such as Valentine's Day box of chocolates, Kooima said.

Valentine's Day Couples Competition is open to undergraduates, graduates and faculty-staff members.

The pro-am handball tournaments that officially open the Fetzer handball/racquetball courts is as big a deal as it sounds. The Spaulding Pro Tournament is on the official U.S. Handball Association pro tour, and will feature 12 of the nations best professionals plus four amateurs who qualified in the Pro Qualifying Tournament held in Fetzer Tuesday and Wednesday.

In addition to the Spaulding tournament, UNC is hosting both an Open Singles and a Masters Singles handball tournament today through Sunday in Fetzer.

There is a limited number of standing room spaces to the Spaulding tournament available to UNC students, free with a UNC ID.

Tomorrow is also the deadline for the inaugural IM gymnastics meet that will be held in 112 Fetzer (Gym C), Monday, Feb. 15. There will be four divisions: men's experienced, men's novice, women's experienced, and women's novice, according to Assoc. IM-Rec Director Marty Pomerantz.

Pomerantz hopes the meet will attract those UNC students of all abilities that enjoy the sport.

"This is the first time (IM-Rec has offered gymnastics) and we'd like it to be a success," he said. He said that having the two ability divisions should offer something for everyone interested in gymnastics.

Basketball team captains should remember that play-off eligibility requires four games played and two games won, according to Asst. IM-Rec Director Janis Matson. Any basketball inquiries should be directed to Matson.

The Grail volleyball tournament also takes its virgin run starting Monday. Patterned after the UNC tradition, grail basketball, this single-elimination tournament will follow regular season volleyball rules. Referees are still needed for the tournament and experienced volleyball referees should contact Asst. IM-Rec Director Rob Frye.

The Chi Omega and ZTA sororities participated in an exhibition basketball game during the halftime of the UNC/Maryland women's basketball game last Saturday in Carmichael, to usher in the new sorority point system. Both sororities were instrumental in getting the system approved by the Panhellenic Council and the IM-Rec Sports Program, renewing a system for women after being dropped in the mid 1970's. This new system applies to sororities only.
