

New Y officers discuss projects

By ROBERT MONTGOMERY
Staff Writer

The Campus Y is gearing up for the remainder of the year with two new co-presidents and several upcoming projects.

Anne Beeson, a junior religion and economics major from Memphis, Tenn., and Bob Royalty, a junior religion and English major from Atlanta, Ga., have been appointed Campus Y co-presidents for 1982.

The Y serves both UNC students and the Chapel Hill/Carrboro community, Beeson said. Its basic purpose is "to let students do what they think needs to be done to help others, the campus, the community and themselves," Royalty said.

More than 600 members are involved in the Y, while 20 committees carry on a wide variety of programs. The programs can be divided into volunteer groups and programs based on "human concerns," he said.

Volunteer groups include the big buddy and nursing home programs. The second group includes global issue and hunger action programs.

The Campus Y is sponsoring the Chapel Hill "Walk for Humanity," on April 13, which raised more than $2,300 last year for service organizations.

Beeson became interested in the Campus Y when she attended its freshman camp. She then got involved with the organization's dinner-discussions. "Dinner-discussions seemed important and I thought they needed to be done," she said.

Royalty became involved in the Campus Y through its annual crafts bazaar. He also worked as a counselor at the freshman camp. "I was attracted to Campus Y because it does unique things and it is concerned with helping others," he said.

Although Beeson and Royalty have not finished their plans for 1982, they outlined a few upcoming Y events.

Co-presidents Anne Beeson, Bob Royalty ... Campus Y appoints new officers

A discussion of "Ethical Responsibility in the Corporate World" is being sponsored by the Campus Y today at 7:30 p.m. in Room 2 Old Carroll. Speakers at the discussion will be Roger Shinn of Union Theological Seminary and Jack Behrman of the University's School of Business. The discussion is a response to concerns expressed by some about their futures in the business world, Royalty said. Shinn will speak on "Wall Street Ethics" at a dinner-discussion at the home of Donald Boulton, vice chancellor for student affairs. The dinner-discussion begins at 5:30 p.m. Sign-up for the event is at the Campus Y office in the Y Building.

Two men hurt in accident on Johnson St.

Two men were injured Tuesday morning by a car swerving to avoid an oncoming truck, according to Chapel Hill police officer Maurice Hayes.

Wu Yuanming, 45, and Lin Qixiong, 48, both of 135B Johnson St., were walking their bicycles along the side of Johnson St. when a 1967 Chevrolet, traveling east, struck the men at about 8:15 a.m. Hayes said the driver of the car was Earl Philip Parker.

"The accident was unavoidable," Hayes said. He and officer John Jones reenacted the accident and determined that the bright sun could have hampered Parker's vision, Hayes said.

Hayes said Parker was not speeding and that Parker had not been charged with any violations.

Both Qixiong and Yuanming were listed in fair condition at N.C. Memorial Hospital Tuesday afternoon.

James Fallows to give lecture

Noted author and editor James Fallows will lecture on "Current Trends in National Defense Planning" Thursday at 8 p.m. in Room 100 Hamilton Hall.

Fallows is the Washington editor of The Atlantic, and author of the book National Defense. He also served as chief speech writer for former President Jimmy Carter.

The lecture is sponsored by the University's Curriculum in Peace, War and Defense. The talk is free, and the public is invited to attend.

There will be a question-and-answer period afterwards. For more information contact Professor James R. Leutz, Chairman of the Curriculum in Peace, War and Defense.

Ballots out

Ballots to nominate University professors for Distinguished Teaching Awards will be at the Carolina Union, Campus Y court and the Undergraduate and Wilson libraries until 5 p.m. March 5. Completed ballots should be submitted to 102 Steele Building.

Most industrial plants would probably locate outside Chapel Hill town limits, Hearn said. He predicted that office and institutional development would be the prime growth area in real estate.

Promotion of Chapel Hill as a prime retirement community will continue to boost the town's population, he said.

"They (retirees) are a windfall for us," Hearn said. "They'll come here from the North with their $500,000 retirement accounts, put it in a local bank and they never require many public services. They don't have any kids in public schools and they rarely use public facilities." The Chamber of Commerce answers more than 3,000 requests for information every year, he added.

Hearn said he was optimistic about Chapel Hill's economic future if economic growth continued to be stressed by the town's citizens.

"There's not one person in Chapel Hill who doesn't want to make more money than he or she did last year," Hearn said. "Business will have to grow if they want to grow."

Rashkis said the recent surge in home sales was encouraging to realtors, but considering the sudden crash of the market in 1982 and the generally unpredictable factors in the economy, he said he did not know if the trend would continue.

The most significant economic factor is inflation, Rashkis said. Increased prices have hit everything, including heat, gasoline and electricity costs. With more people spending money for these necessities, fewer dollars are spent on retail items. A Chamber of Commerce survey confirmed this in a study comparing retail purchases in 1970 and 1980.

"The study showed that Orange County residents spent 50 cents of every dollar for retail purchases in 1970," said Les Houser, president of the chamber of commerce. "But for 1980, that figure decreased to 35 cents per dollar."

Houser attributed the decrease in retail sales to the rechanneling of household funds and to the number of high-priced items residents purchase outside of Chapel Hill, such as furniture and automobiles.

But one business leader suggested that the real problem with retail sales was the limited selection of goods in Chapel Hill. "Why should anyone from Chapel Hill go to Franklin Street or University Mall when he could go to Durham and find a bigger selection at a better price?"

Houser, however, said selection was not the problem. "Chapel Hill retailers do have good selection and excellent facilities." He added that the chamber had targeted customer service as an area that Chapel Hill merchants could improve.

Hearn said the chamber planned to launch a campaign to get more Chapel Hill and Carrboro residents to patronize local merchants.

Promotional goals of the chamber also center on attracting high-technology, but low utility—using, industries. "Take for example, an airline reservations center," Hearn said. "It would provide jobs and capital without using a lot of water." More importantly, high-technology industry, with all its expensive equipment, would increase the industrial tax base, he said.

"By getting more industrial tax revenue, the tax burden will be shifted away from residential property owners, who already pay too much in taxes."

He said the bills passage halted other reductions in a staff already pared from about 2,000 to 1,800 under the initial round of Reagan administration budget cuts. "That was the first layoff," he said. "We would have had to lay off another 380 (employees) under December's cuts."
