

Police report arrests for crimes

Shoplifting and auto battery thefts have continued in the Chapel Hill area despite recent arrest for such crimes, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

Joshua Earl Flamer, 27, of Chapel Hill was arrested and charged with larceny Tuesday at the Fast Fare Convenience Store on West Rosemary Street, according to police records. The suspect was arrested after a police officer responded to a complaint of suspicious activity and found Flamer attempting to exit from the rear of the store with four packs of meat. Flamer is scheduled to appear in court March 9. Bond was set at $300.

A battery, valued at $50, was stolen from the car of Edward O'Keefe Monday night, according to police reports. The car was parked in front of O'Keefe's residence at 828 Shady Lawn Rd. Police say there are no suspects or evidence in the case.

Also, according to police records, Mary E. Shaw, a UNC housing employee, was arrested Tuesday on charges of assault and battery against her husband. Mrs. Shaw 40, was arrested after Mack Shaw ordered a warrant for her arrest for striking him with a baseball bat. A court date was set for March 9.

In yesterday's story, "Inaugurations held for presidents-elect," The Daily Tar Heel incorrectly reported that Dennis Whittle was a freshman from Greensboro. Whittle, who was appointed head of the Academic Procedures Committee, is a junior from Manchester, N.H. The DTH regrets the error.

Iran instability biggest danger in Middle East

By SUZETTE ROACH
Staff Writer

Iranian instability is the biggest danger facing the Middle East, Robert Neumann, ambassador to Saudi Arabia during the early months of the Reagan administration, said in a speech here Tuesday.

Neumann, who left his post after disagreements with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, told an audience of 60 in Gerrard Hall the threat of a Soviet invasion in the Middle East is not as great as many Americans believe. The U.S. effort to strengthen its strategic position in the region and deter the Soviets from invading he said is only marginally decreasing the likelihood of an invasion. The real danger comes from Iran.

"There is total ignorance of what will happen next in Iran," Neumann said. When Iranian leader the Ayatollah Khomeini dies, there will be government disorder, and the results of the struggle are unforeseeable, he said. A continuation of Iranian fundamentalism or a leftist takeover are the most likely outcomes, neither of which is favored by the United States.

Khomeini's fundamentalism is deeply destabilizing because it addresses a wider audience than Iran, Neumann said. Khomeini speaks of forming an Islamic nation. Fundamentalism is popular because it appeals to the widespread disappointment with modernization and secularization in the region.

Neumann also spoke about the prospects and requirements for peace in the Middle East.

"Any credible peace process has to end with Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory," he said. "There can be no peace if Israel insists on annexation."

Neumann said simultaneous pressure should be put on the Arab countries to give official — not implicit — recognition to Israel. "We cannot give the Arabs a free ride," he said.

The Saudis are taking a moderate role in Middle Eastern questions, but they are not powerful enough to bring peace by themselves, Neumann said. The United States has the power to bring changes, but "we do not have a Middle Eastern policy, and if we did it would undoubtedly be wrong," he said.

The United States needs to formulate a Mideast policy based on self-interest and "the realization that we have more than one friend (Israel) in the region," Neumann said. The United States should not hesitate to disagree violently when Israel tramples on its interests, he said.

Neumann's speech was sponsored by the curriculum in Peace, War and Defense.

to increase the occupancy of 219 residence hall rooms and alleviate some of the tripling problems of the fall, she said.

The guaranteed freshman housing proposal is not a sudden decision, both Graham and Boulton said.

"It's been an ongoing discussion within the Department of Housing and with RHA — just not in the form of a recommendation" for several years, Graham said.

"I guess you could only discuss something for so long, and then you either up it or down it," Boulton said.

GPSF opposes cuts in financial aid

By MARK STINNEFORD
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Federation is starting a petition drive and a letter-writing campaign to express opposition to proposed cuts in student financial aid by the federal government.

The petition drive is in response to President Ronald Reagan's proposal to eliminate the Guaranteed Student Loan Program for graduate and professional students, said GPSF President Peter Mallinson.

Tentative plans call for the completed petitions to be presented in a campus rally to U.S. Rep. Ike Andrews of North Carolina's 4th Congressional District (Chatham, Durham, Wake and Randolph counties), who is now a member of the House Post-Secondary Education Subcommittee.

Although specific details of the rally have not yet been announced, Andrews' staff has expressed interest in the proposal, Mallinson said. The GPSF hopes to get signatures from at least 3,000 of the 4,500 graduate and professional students at UNC.

The letter-writing campaign, which will encourage participation by both graduate and undergraduate students, will begin in the Carolina Union on Friday, GPSF Secretary Mae Liau said. The GPSF will set up tables to provide stamps, stationery and envelopes to students interested in expressing their opinion on financial aid cutbacks.

The petition drive and letter-writing campaign are part of an effort to reorganize the GPSF and its activity and visibility on campus, Mallinson said.

"Clearly, we've got an awareness problem," he said. "Many graduate and professional students are so immersed in their own departments that they don't get involved in campus activities at all and thereby lose power."

To encourage greater cohesion in the graduate and professional student community, the GPSF will organize more activities and social functions involving the entire community, he said. The organization also plans to increase contact between the six graduate representatives on the Campus Governing Council and the 70-member GPSF Senate, which is composed of representatives from each academic department.

CGC allocates to GPSF funds equalling 15 percent of graduate and professional student fees, Mallinson said. Most of the money is channelled back to the departments on the basis of the number of students in each, and the remaining funds are used to cover GPSF administrative costs. Of the nearly $17,000 allocated to the GPSF for the 1981-82 academic year, more than 75 percent was turned over to the departments, Liau said.
