

Touring Sofia Orchestra to perform this Sunday

The Sofia Philharmonic Orchestra, on tour in the United States to celebrate the 1,300th anniversary of the establishment of Bulgaria, will perform Sunday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The orchestra, which has appeared in 22 European countries and toured the United States in 1978, is under the direction of Konstantin Iliev.

The program will consist of Vladigerov's Bulgarian Rhapsody "Vardar", Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major, and Dvorak's Symphony #8 in G major.

The soloist for the Tchaikovsky work will be Mincho Minchev, who has won acclaim at European concerts and competitions. Minchev plays a Stradivarius bought for him by the Bulgarian government. He joins a long line of performers such as Rostropovich, Menuhin and Oistrakh, who have conducted or played with the orchestra.

Founded in 1928, the Sofia Philharmonic plays the standard concert repertoire. At least one work by a Bulgarian composer is performed by the orchestra in every concert to foster the recognition of Bulgarian music.

Tickets for the concert are $2.50 for students and may be purchased at the Carolina Union box office.

UNC group organizes against four-year term

Groups are being organized at colleges across North Carolina in objection to the proposed constitutional amendment to allow state legislators four-year terms. The UNC chapter of the Keep The Two-Year Term Committee held an organizational meeting Wednesday.

The Keep The Two-Year Term Committee is a bipartisan state-wide organization headed by Tom Gilmore, a former legislator from Guilford County, said UNC law student Harry Kaplan. Kaplan and Richard Roper, a junior at UNC-Greensboro and governor of the North Carolina Student Legislature, are in charge of organizing chapters of the committee on North Carolina campuses.

Kaplan said the committee was formed to counter the traditional apathy of North Carolinians toward constitutional amendments. Voters passed 22 of the last 23 proposed amendments. Often voters who were uninformed or apathetic approved amendments, figuring the legislature knew best, Kaplan said.

Educating students and the Chapel Hill-Carrboro community on the potential negative impact of the amendment, which will be voted on this summer, is the major purpose of the UNC chapter, said Joe D'Amico, chairman of the UNC North Carolina Student Legislature. UNC Young Democrats President Michael Renigar and UNC College Republicans President Steve Long are the vice chairmen of the UNC chapter of the committee.

"Our committee at UNC will be focusing on informing students about the issue through leaflets, meetings and speakers," D'Amico said. He also said he hopes to set up a campus debate between Gilmore and Henson Barnes, the Goldsboro senator who proposed the amendment. There will be a state-wide press conference in March.

D'Amico said two-year terms keep the legislators accountable and accessible to the citizens. "The amendment would make the General Assembly less responsive to the needs of the people," D'Amico said. "North Carolina's governor is the only one in the nation without the veto power, and the opportunity to vote every two years is one of the few checks we have on the legislature's power." "There is no organized support for the amendment, only unorganized apathy," Kaplan said.

Opponents of the amendment are also concerned because the legislators would be elected during off-year elections, when voter turnout is traditionally low.

Organization of Keep The Two-Year Term Committees at other colleges will be similar to that at UNC, Kaplan said. If there is an NCSL chapter on campus, the chairman of NCSL will serve as chairman of the committee chapter.

The state-wide NCSL group passed a resolution against the amendment at its January meeting. The chairman of the Young Democrats and College Republicans also are being asked to serve on the committees.

This method of organization stresses the bipartisan nature of opposition to the amendment, Kaplan said. Opposition to the amendment is diverse, including the North Carolina AFL-CIO; the North Carolina Association of Educators; John Brooks, Commissioner of Labor; Marse Grant, editor of the Biblical Recorder; and former Governors Terry Sanford, Bob Scott and James Holshouser.

Students, faculty to march at Fort Bragg

About 100 UNC students and faculty will join a rally at Fort Bragg Saturday to protest the training of Salvadoran soldiers there, student organizers said Thursday.

"We're building a movement of people protesting U.S. involvement in El Salvador," said UNC student Richard McGough, the Chapel Hill contact for the Fort Bragg Coalition, which is organizing the demonstration.

Father Henry Atkins, chief spokesman for the Coalition and an Episcopal chaplain at UNC-Greensboro, said, "We want to make clear our demand that aid to El Salvador be cut off. We want to make clear our opposition to the training of Salvadoran soldiers at Fort Bragg, which is costing us $15 to $18 million a year at a time when student aid is being cut."

The protesters will be permitted to enter the base for a rally following a demonstration in Fayetteville.

Fort Bragg spokesman Capt. Bill Maddox said, "They (the Coalition) have indicated that it will be a peaceful demonstration. That's what they said the last time, and that's how things turned out."

A Jan. 11 El Salvador protest involving 300 people was held at the base without incident.

Maddox added that security precautions would be taken nonetheless. "Basically, we'll have a security force to guide people where they're supposed to go and to react to any type trouble," he said.

Fayetteville Police Chief Daniel Dixon refused to comment. "We are taking the standard procedures for handling this kind of operation and we are not making any statement other than that," he said.

McGough said the rally will begin at 10 a.m. in Pope Park, on Rt. 301, with speakers, music and entertainment. At 1 p.m. a motorcade will travel down Grove Street to Bragg Boulevard, and protesters will enter Fort Bragg for a 2 p.m. rally.

McGough and 11 other members of groups which organized the rally held a press conference at Sen. Jesse Helms' office in Raleigh Thursday and stated their views of the crisis in El Salvador. Helms was not there, McGough said.

Ballet to perform at Union Saturday

The American Ballet Theatre II will end a four-week tour with a performance in Chapel Hill Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

A New York-based company, the ABT II was formed in 1972 by Richard Englund. According to Englund, ABT II is designed to be a "transitional step from student to professional," spotlighting young dancers whose ages range from 17 to 21.

The ABT performance is sponsored by the Triangle Dance Guild and the Carolina Union. Tickets are available at the Union Box Office. For more information call 962-1449.
