

First New Well health fair to emphasize total fitness

By MARY EVANS
Staff Writer

The first New Well Student Health Fair will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and tomorrow in the Pit and the Great Hall of the Carolina Union.

The fair is sponsored by the Student Health Service and the New Well, a division of SHS. The fair is designed to "turn students on to a holistic approach to health," said health fair coordinator Karan Stamey. "We want to promote the health of the mind and spirit as well as the body."

The fair will contain a variety of activities and demonstrations, Stamey said. The UNC Clogging Club and Ballroom Dance Club will appear at noon today in the Pit, and the Loreleis will perform at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow. In addition, peer health educators from the New Well will exhibit games intended to help students increase their creativity and communication skills.

Health Educator Lucie Minuto was hired by the Student Health Service to promote health education at the University.

"Students in general tend to be a healthy group," Minuto said. "Our goal is to teach the skills and information that will help students to be as healthful as they possibly can be."

The health fair will inform students about relevant health issues like stress, relationships and nutrition, said peer educator Roanne Plotnitzky.

"We want to place emphasis on the spiritual side of health as well as the physical side," she said. "We'll have information on topics like meditation and spiritual survival."

The various workshops, booths and movies at the fair will be both informative and fun, Plotnitzky said. "We want to show all the free, fun and healthy activities one can take part in without ever leaving the campus."

Kevin Monroe, chairman of Student Government's Food Service/Health Service Committee, said the FSAC handled the Student Government report fairly.

Student Government plans to present its original proposal to the UNC Board of Trustees Friday, April 9, when it will consider the FSAC report, Monroe said. As student body president, Vandenberg is a voting member of the BOT. He could not be reached for comment.

coverage away from serious issues and toward visible events, said the author of the best-sellers The Best and the Brightest and The Powers That Be.

"We now have a president with a very strong ideology, and yet he wasn't even examined in 1980. I think Ronald Reagan had a freebie in 1980," he said.

When the network news reporters spend only moments on complex issues and focus only on visible events the medium is allowed to form public perceptions of the world, he said. "Television will not report on serious answers to serious questions."

By limiting the viewer's perception of his world, television also forces figures who want to be in the news to provide exciting images for the viewers, thus shaping politicians to conform to "newsworthy" standards, Halberstam said.
