The year that . . .

UNC officials cancel classes because of heavy snow; Tar Heel fans go wild after the basketball team made it to the NCAA finals. It has been one of those years—the expected—the long lines—and the unexpected—the NCAA Championship.

Carolina students laughed while waiting for athletic events tickets, but they also have involved themselves with controversial issues. Concern about the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse endangered by beach erosion drew students, and two political foes together, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. and Gov. Jim Hunt. Protesters voiced their disfavor for President Ronald Reagan's El Salvador policies. But Reagan held his ground. See page 4 and 5 for more photos from the year that . . .
