

Problem of weeding out junk before moving not impossible

By MARY MCKEEL
Staff Writer

With final exams and three months of relaxing summer sun on the horizon, many students may have neglected an important, yet unpleasant task—moving out of the dormitory.

Besides weeding out a year's collection of UNC memorabilia and junk, students should also remember to arrange for their phone disconnection, file a change-of-address card and store furniture in residence halls' storage areas.

In order to disconnect dormitory phones, students should fill out the disconnection cards provided by Resident Assistants. If a phone is not disconnected, all calls made on that phone will be charged to the student responsible, said G. E. Mullen of Southern Bell Telephone Company.

But in order to get those phone bills, students must file a change of address with the Chapel Hill or Carrboro post office.

Change-of-address kits should arrive in the residence halls from the post office this week. "There are a number of cards to notify everybody: the bank or the credit card company or magazine publishers. You should file those cards with everybody—now," said Chapel Hill Postmaster F.M. Reigher. "We pull everything from the mailboxes on the Monday following the end of school," he said. The cost of forwarding magazines from the residence hall to the student's summer address can be more than the newsstand price, he added.

Students returning in the fall may want to rent a moving van to bring Mom's furniture home. U-Haul vans, which are available in 10-, 12-, 14- and 20-foot sizes, cost anywhere from $70 to $950. Prices are based on the van's size and the distance to be traveled; customers must pay for gas themselves. U-Haul vans can be obtained at outlets at Eastgate and University malls. There is also an alternative to that tedious van trip. Most dormitories provide storage space for students to keep furniture and refrigerators over the summer, although lockers cannot be stored. "We hope that in a few years we will have some storage space for lockers," said Residence Hall Association President Scott Templeton.

Campus, local placement services list types of employment openings

By WENDELL WOOD

If you have clerical skills or are willing to give unskilled labor a try, you'll probably find a job in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area this summer, according to several local business and job placement services.

However, if you have your heart set on a restaurant or sales position, you may find yourself studying during summer school.

Most local restaurants and shops have already hired for the summer, yet many proprietors of these businesses said it was worthwhile to go ahead and turn in applications since work turnovers are more frequent in the summer.

Students opting to remain in Chapel Hill also can seek out jobs through several placement services, as well as through the University. Vi Cheek of Manpower Temporary Services, said they place a lot of students in summer employment.

"A student with any office skills needs to make an appointment with us, and those who wish to work in the industrial division (construction or yard work) can just come into our office between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.," Cheek said.

The Student Aid Office in Vance Hall posts job openings from local employers, according to Mary Garren, assistant director for employment in the Student Aid Office. She said students qualified for financial aid were set up in work-study programs, but most positions have already been filled.

The Orange County Employment and Training office is in the process of designing a program to place students aged 14 to 21 in area jobs. Ernest Mangum, director of employment for this agency, said the program will be submitted for approval April 30 to the state division of employment and training. It will coordinate employment in clerical work, summer camps, personnel, unskilled labor, and for various social agencies.

UNC's Physical Plant hires several students for a 40-hour work week each summer, and housing and maintenance crews also will be filled.

A spokesman from N.C. Memorial Hospital said there were often temporary clerical and lab assistant openings in the hospital, although the hospital's personnel department did not advertise them.

SINCE IT'S THE END of the year we have one last thing to say to our buddies: Lisa (clodhopper), don't let your elephant go on a C-hunt without a ram on his stout snout; we don't need anymore dogs on campus. Can you really be on the eight year plan when you have your lei(s) in the back seat? The KD's tell us that clod isn't a gentleman—he leaves you sitting too long from the table. 32 chugalug? 36 chugalug?

Betsy (hosebag), how bout them creepy crabsys (sp) at the beach—did he make a good blanket? So, no sand in your Schlitz, huh? "Take off" that ugly bathing suit. Since the gang taught you not to blow, don't hesitate to aspirate! P.S. Big Mama knows you're the bed-hopping kid, but she'll never know who you really did.

"Know-know" (in the Biblical sense), are you the reason Pope didn't complain? Heineken wanted more peanut butter. Kaufman is not Italian, but we hear he has "Roamin'" hands. Black Label Men (Chris and Summy), may the force be with you, best wishes William Holden. Girls, ick! Don't let the archnag get you down. Let's play "Dial Chris' Hoodie" . . . AACHOO! Summy, your muscles droop like the girls wild but the funk pile drove them away. LM's three o'clock. NE high noon! P.S. Big Mama says come back when you can't stay so long.

Draino, what does a T.I.T. feel like? "Gammmon, can you drive?" David, you're really stupid.

Roy congrats on not blowing grits this year. We think we would if we ate sour creme on a bagel and got down on it (Kool and the Gang). R-O-Y, do you think as slow as you talk?

Kim, we wanted to include you, but Roy would mutilate us. We'll tell you in person. Happy Birthday! Roy, is that O.K. Gammmon, should we write anything about us? Steve, no—we don't have any more money.

Because of a proofreading error, it was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel that auditions for the University Summer Chorus will be held May 3 and 4. The auditions will be May 3 and 5. The DTH regrets the error.

Register to vote for primary elections

Upcoming state and local primary elections will be held in North Carolina on June 10, according to Joe Herzberg, former Chapel Hill town council member. Any student warning to vote in the election must register by May 17. Herzberg said that presently only about 400 UNC students were registered to vote.
