Honor court nominees ok'd

By ALISON DAVIS
News Editor

In a meeting last week, the summer session of the Campus Governing Council approved the nominees to the 1982-1983 Undergraduate Honor Court and the summer session Undergraduate Honor Court.

The full council was scheduled to approve the 1982-1983 Honor Court in May, but postponed doing so after CGC member Garth Dunklin (District 11) said he had heard that one of the nominees had been caught stealing.

"One name was brought to my attention by someone as having been involved—at his place of work—in thievery," Dunklin told the council.

CGC speaker Bobby Vogler said this week, he had talked with Honor Court Chairman Elizabeth Ennen and had been assured that all the nominees were thoroughly screened before their names were submitted to the CGC for approval.

"Nothing had since been reported to her and if anything had they (the attorney general's staff) would definitely look it over and judge on their own," Vogler said.

CGC member Jennifer Cargal (District 15) said the council was given no proof to back up the allegations.

"No one has substantiated any claim against anyone from the Honor Court," Cargal said.

The summer CGC also approved an 11 member Honor Court for the summer sessions. The summer court was supposed to consist of 15 members, but "they haven't gotten the 15 yet," Vogler said.

In other business, the summer CGC approved a four member Audit Board. Serving two-year terms will be Caroline B. Cockrell and Donald C. Yount. The one-year positions will be filled by Yvonne Jordan and Michael Walker.

The council also approved acting Student Attorney General Leake Little. Little will serve as student Attorney General for the first session of summer school.

90 days for protesters

Alex Charnes and Mark Beaty, UNC students who sat in at the main entrance of Ft. Bragg and delayed traffic to protest the training of Salvadoran troops there, were sentenced to 90 days in prison Monday.

Patrick O'Neil, a student at East Carolina University, was also sentenced, while Stephen Kahn, a UNC student who pleaded guilty to the charges was given probation.

The U.S. Marshal's office in Raleigh said that the three have begun serving their sentences at the Cumberland County jail, which is being leased by the federal government, but that they may be transferred to a federal prison later.
