

Moving in

Orientation counselor Margo Wickersham (left) exemplifies the strain of moving students into the dormitory. She worked at Morrison Residence Hall. Newcomers get preview of life at UNC

"I got to meet a couple of really good friends. In fact, I met one guy who I had not seen since the sixth grade," said Chris Thomas after attending Freshman Camp.

Cindy Cowan said, "Camp served as a starting ground and enabled me to feel a little bit more at home before I got thrown in with everyone else."

Freshman Camp is an annual event sponsored by Campus Y and run by student volunteers. Camp New Hope, which is 8 miles from Chapel Hill, was the site where 35 upperclassmen counselors and 175 freshmen gathered the weekend of Aug. 13-15 for a variety of fun, discussions, lectures and serious friend-making.

UNC senior Doug Richardson, who was co-director along with senior Kiri Craig, explained that the camp was established 35 years ago to give incoming freshmen a small set of friends to help them adjust to Carolina.

"We have them participate in lectures, ice-breaking activities and serious discussions about problems they may face," he said. "Both student leaders and faculty members are invited to come speak to the freshmen."

Richardson also said that the freshmen campers aren't the only ones who have fun at camp. He said the volunteer counselors, who are chosen through a screening process in the spring, gain many of the same benefits that the campers do.

Counselor Cindy Delastatious, who had been a camper last year, said she had more fun this year. "I really became close to the freshmen I was responsible for, and I got a better chance to see some of their needs," she said. "I would encourage anyone who likes meeting and helping people to get involved in the program."

Joe Mainous, a counselor who had not been a camper, echoed that sentiment. "Freshman camp is an excellent opportunity for someone to get involved in a worthwhile project," he said. "You meet a lot of people and have a great time."

Villa Capri

6644 Chapel Hill Blvd.

When Ginero Carbone came to America he could speak little English, but he brought with him something that proved to be more valuable... a knowledge of Old World recipes and a firm resolve to never cut corners or dilute the richness of his art. This proved to be a successful combination with his restaurant in Brooklyn, N.Y. for many years.

His sons, however, preferred the Southern life style and opened the now famous Villa Capri in Raleigh, N.C. That was twenty-five years ago and in all those years the Carbone family has never forgotten the original formula for success—no shortcuts and use the very best quality meats, cheese and wines to produce the same excellent food first served in America over 50 years ago.

Mr. Carbone invites UNC to make the Villa Capri the "TARHEEL ITALIAN RESTAURANT... a sampling..."
