N. C. health costs relatively low

By JOSEPH OLINICK
Staff Writer

Health care — everyone needs it at some time — and North Carolina is one of the cheapest places to get it. North Carolina is ranked sixth in the nation in low health care costs, according to Kay Lasater, director of communications for the North Carolina Hospital Association. The main reason is that the cost of living in this state is very low compared to other states. Still, hospitals are making efforts to reduce and contain health care costs.

An emphasis on outpatient care has been made in most hospitals, Lasater said. Outpatient care cuts costs by about 50 percent because one of the most expensive elements of hospital care, a room, is eliminated. At North Carolina Memorial Hospital a same-day surgery program, which permits the patient to have certain types of operations without an overnight stay, opened earlier this year and, according to a hospital spokesperson, it has been doing 25 to 50 operations each week.

Share buying is another method that some hospitals are using to cut health care costs, Lasater said. In it, separate hospitals join together like a co-op to buy supplies, engineering services and computers. Or a hospital buys through Carolina Hospital and Health Services, a purchasing agency which promotes shared services. Many hospitals are trying to make physicians more aware of procedures that drive health care costs up, such as admitting patients a day or two early and unnecessarily keeping patients in the hospital, Lasater said.

Also, hospitals are making their doctors more aware of the high costs of tests and laboratory work in an effort to reduce unnecessary testing.

Dr. Edward Shahady, director of family medicine at NCMH, said that over-testing by doctors is a result of the system that trains them.

"The system of training doctors does not look at the behavioral aspects as it does the physical," he said. "Doctors are trained to make sure there's not something biological there. So, they order tests. This type of philosophy sometimes leads to inappropriate and costly ordering of tests.

"I'm not saying our system is all bad. Our training system needs to place proper emphasis on common problems."

Shahady said he thought outpatient care was good because the patient can be seen by a doctor that is familiar with him or her.

"One of the items that I think would reduce the cost of medical care would be for the doctor to know his patients and the environment they live in," he said. Shahady went on to say that a doctor was less likely to order unnecessary tests if he was familiar with the patient.

Like hospitals, Blue Cross and Blue Shield is trying to cut down health care costs. It is doing so by offering doctors incentives to treat cases in their offices or in clinics, according to the NCHA.

NCMH has been trying to eliminate health care costs by improving health with Good Life, a health education program. Some of its programs for the public are on pre-conception health, stress management and first aid for baby sitters.

One of the newest trends in health care is represented by Minor Emergency Medical Services on Chapel Hill Boulevard.

"For less complex problems, it (the center) certainly is better in terms of cost and convenience," John Braun, the center's administrator said. "If I'm having a heart attack or something serious, I'm going to the hospital."

"We see general to complex bone breaks, female problems, sore throats, cases of venereal disease and a lot of pediatrics."

"Minor emergency medical care centers are a fast-growing mode."

Gemayel sworn in as Lebanon's president

The Associated Press

Amin Gemayel took over as Lebanon's president Thursday, vowing to stop "the vicious cycle of bloody violence" that has gripped his land for eight years.

"It expresses all we had in mind, really," former Prime Minister Saeb Salam, a Moslem, said of the Christian president's inaugural speech. "We have great hopes in him."

In the Mediterranean, 1,800 U.S. Marines aboard the helicopter carrier Guam steamed toward Beirut to join a new three-nation peacekeeping force charged with guarding against further Christian-Moslem bloodletting. The first peacekeeping unit, 300 French paratroopers, was expected in the Lebanese capital Friday morning, and the Marines on Saturday.

Recriminations from last week's Beirut refugee camp massacre continued to rock Israel.

An estimated 3,000 demonstrators, shouting "Begin resign!" marched on Prime Minister Menachem Begin's home as protests continued over his government's refusal to authorize an independent inquiry into Israeli conduct during the mass killings, which were carried out by Israel's Lebanese Christian allies.

The respected Israeli newspaper Haaretz quoted two Israeli soldiers stationed near the massacre scene as saying they suspected a slaughter was under way in the Palestinian camps and had informed their commanders, but were told: "It's all right, don't worry."

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon says Israeli troops helped coordinate the Christian Phalangist militia raid on the two predominantly Moslem camps, but never expected it to end in a massacre. He says Israeli forces intervened to stop the bloodbath.

Lebanese Red Cross workers on Thursday dug for bodies among the earth and rubble pushed up by bulldozers in an attempt to hide the bodies in the Sabra and Chatila camps.

A spokesman said five bodies were found Thursday morning, bringing the total recovered to 298. Relief officials said many more may be buried.

The Lebanese military prosecutor-general announced he had launched an official probe to try to determine who was responsible for the killings.

Amin Gemayel, 40, a political leader of the Phalange Party, was elected president by the Lebanese Parliament on Tuesday, replacing his 34-year-old brother Bashir, the Phalangist militia leader and president-elect who was assassinated in a bomb blast Sept. 14.

He took the oath of office before the assembled Parliament at a military school on Beirut's outskirts.

"I shall offer no program of a new era because a single concern grips us now. . . . This is to stop the vicious cycle of bloody violence on Lebanon's soil," he declared.

"The wars of others in Lebanon and at Lebanon's expense must stop. This will be accomplished by a strong, independent sovereign state capable of safeguarding public freedoms and bringing about a withdrawal of all foreign armies from the entire soil of the homeland."
