More Marines to land in Lebanon

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The 800 U.S. Marines who landed in Beirut on Wednesday likely will be joined by another 400 leathernecks with tanks and artillery, possibly as early as Thursday, according to Pentagon officials. President Reagan said the Americans may stay in Lebanon even after Israeli and Syrian troops leave.

The Pentagon officials said preparations were being made for additional forces and equipment to be sent ashore, but they stressed that the final decision had to be made by the Marines' commander, Col. James M. Mead. They said, however, that the expanded duties of the Marines made the additional deployment likely.

Reagan notified Congress on Wednesday that the first contingent of Marines had returned to Beirut. His formal notification, required under the War Powers Act, said the troops "will not engage in combat," but may "exercise the right of self-defense and will be equipped accordingly."

The president told Congress that the Marines would be in Lebanon "only for a limited period of time." But he later told reporters on a political trip that he expects the Syrians and Israelis to leave "sooner than Lebanon will be ready for us to" remove the Marines.

It was the second time that Marines were sent to the Lebanese capital. The leathernecks, members of the 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit stationed with the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, helped oversee the evacuation of 6,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas in late August and earlier this month.

A Pentagon official, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday that the Marines have a much larger area to patrol this time, making it likely that Mead will call for the armor and artillery reinforcements. During the PLO evacuation, the U.S. troops were confined to the harbor area at the northern edge of the city.

WASHINGTON — Democrats failed in two bids Wednesday to provide increased aid to victims of the recession as the Senate approved urgent legislation needed to keep the federal government running after midnight Thursday.

The final vote, 72-26, cleared the way for House and Senate negotiators to begin work Thursday morning on a compromise version of the measure needed to provide funds for literally every federal agency.

Members expressed confidence that there was time for both houses to approve whatever compromise emerges before the new fiscal year begins at 12:01 a.m. Friday. But even so, the bill provides funds only through mid-December, so a post-election session of Congress will be necessary.

Senate approval came several hours after the first of two Democratic campaign season anti-recession proposals, a plan to liberalize unemployment benefits in more than two dozen states, was rejected 51-47. Officials said it would have cost between $478 million and $3 billion and helped 600,000 unemployed workers or more, depending on the level of joblessness over the next 12 months.

Democrats then lost, 60-37, on a proposed temporary program of 200,000 public service construction jobs at an estimated cost of about $1 billion.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Former Gov. George C. Wallace edged Lt. Gov. George McMillan in the Democratic gubernatorial runoff, and McMillan conceded late Wednesday, saying he was willing to accept the outcome.

Wallace, reborn politically as a racial moderate, defeated McMillan by about 19,000 votes out of nearly 1 million cast in Tuesday's runoff, according to unofficial results.

Wallace, 63, is seeking a record fourth term in the Statehouse he dominated for the better part of two decades.
