Salvadoran guerrillas launch more attacks

The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist guerrillas said they attacked four more towns, and vowed Wednesday to step up their attacks on military and civilian transport.

Rebel and government announcements gave conflicting casualty figures following four days of fierce battles throughout the country that appeared to be the biggest guerrilla offensive in months. Reports from both sides indicated at least 43 soldiers and 32 rebels died in the round of fighting that started Sunday when the guerrillas attacked the town of Las Vueltas, 50 miles north of the capital.

The underground rebel station Radio Venceremos said that "starting Thursday, government transport will be sabotaged."

It said all traffic should stay off the highways starting Friday.

Skirmishes were reported Wednesday in Santa Ana, 40 miles west of the capital, and at two points on the slopes of the Guazapa volcano north of San Salvador.

The rebels said that on Tuesday they overran the towns of Torola, Perquin and San Fernando in Morazan province, a rugged area 105 miles northeast of the capital. Guerrillas have long had strongholds in the Morazan countryside.

The three towns had been held by the guerrillas before government troops launched a massive attack in June and took them under control. At least 200 people were reported killed on both sides in the June battles for the three towns.

This week's guerrilla offensive was seen as the largest and most widespread in six months. Officials noted that the rebels attacked towns throughout the country, instead of concentrating their assaults on single targets as they had been doing in recent weeks.

On Tuesday, the rebels attacked Cinquera, a town of 5,000 people in Cabanas province 27 miles northeast of San Salvador, officials said. Col. Sigfrido Ochoa, the local army commander, said nine soldiers and 25 guerrillas were killed in the four-hour clash before the rebels were driven away.

Guerrillas said they killed 15 soldiers and wounded 90 others in the attack.

In Sunday's attack on Las Vueltas, official reports said 13 troops died and 16 others were wounded, while five guerrillas were killed. The short-wave rebel Radio Farabundo Martí claimed 16 troops killed and 14 wounded in the fighting.

An army source in the provincial capital of Chalatenango said most of the soldiers reported missing in a guerrilla raid on a 100-man army post near Las Vueltas had reappeared safe and sound. The guerrillas' radio has claimed, however, that 58 troops were captured during that operation.

There were no reports of new fighting in Las Vueltas on Wednesday.

In other actions, guerrillas killed five soldiers and wounded four in two ambushes Tuesday in Usulután province, about 65 miles east of San Salvador, a local national guard commander said. He said the rebels also shot down a crop-dusting plane and set up two roadblocks on the important Coastal Highway, killing two civilians.

OSLO, Norway — Two longtime crusaders for world disarmament — Alva Myrdal of Sweden and Alfonso Garcia Robles of Mexico — have won the 1982 Nobel Peace Prize.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee said Wednesday it selected the pair in hopes of spurring the growing worldwide movement against nuclear arms.

Both Mrs. Myrdal, a sociologist and former diplomat and politician, and the 71-year-old Garcia Robles have put years of work into the U.N. process of arms control negotiations based in Geneva.

She headed the Swedish delegation to the Geneva talks in 1962-73, and Garcia Robles has been chief Mexican delegate to the United Nations in Geneva since 1977. The Nobel Committee also took special note of his key role in negotiating a 1967 treaty declaring Latin America a nuclear-free zone.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Wednesday night that despite a "pounding economic hangover" that has left 11 million Americans unemployed, the nation is "recovery-bound and the world knows it."

He had billed his televised speech as a non-partisan report on the economy, then concluded it with the 1982 Republican campaign theme, urging: "We can do it, my fellow Americans, by staying the course."

The president said his economic programs will bring a resurgence "built to last" because it will create new jobs without rekindling inflation.

Democratic Socialism — alternative to Reaganomics

By CINDI ROSS
Staff Writer

The distribution of wealth and income has remained roughly unchanged for the past 50 years, with 1 percent of Americans controlling 50 percent of the wealth, Penny Schantz, National Organizer for the youth section of the Democratic Socialists of America, said Tuesday.

Schantz, speaking before approximately 25 people at a DSA meeting in the Carolina Union, discussed "The Real Alternative to Reaganomics." She explained that Reaganomics called for abandonment of government regulation and massive tax cuts which would bring more benefits to the wealthiest 2 percent than the bottom 51 percent of our society.

"I believe that there is a serious viable alternative to Reaganomics, to domination by the wealthy, militarism, nuclear power and cutbacks in youth services and education," said Schantz, "and to me that is Democratic Socialism."

"To solve our economic crisis, we will have to develop publicly owned, democratically controlled enterprises which are able to create decentralized, renewable energy sources and sound mass transit systems," said Schantz. In health care, she continued, "Only a decentralized public health care system, run by the communities which it serves, can deliver an anti-inflationary form of humane health care."

Schantz said the DSA proposes that the workers who created America's wealth share in it, and that people should participate in making the decisions which would have profound effects on their lives.

"The closing of a plant devastates a community by taking money out of the community and thus closing schools and decreasing police protection," she said. "I think that's a social decision — people in the community should decide."

From the DSA's point of view, the economic crisis can only be resolved by extending democracy to all realms of society, instilling a spirit of popular control which can revive a cooperative, non-competitive, approach to politics. "This will require restrictions on corporate power and democratic control and ownership of the decisive means of production and distribution," said Schantz.

Comparing today's youth to those of the '60s, Schantz said, "We're trying to do more than stop a war — although that was a great undertaking — we're trying to stop Reagan's attack on the American way of life and on the world."
