Wrestlers hope to set lineup in Blue/White

Losing several close matches in the semifinals prevented the North Carolina wrestling team from defending its Monarch Invitational title last weekend. The Tar Heels fell to ACC foe Clemson, 157-149 in the 20-team field. Still, head coach Bill Lam was pleased.

"Basically, I'm pleased with the efforts and the performances our guys had," Lam said. "We are still looking for improvement as the year goes on. We have had an excellent preseason."

Indeed, the Tar Heels looked ready for a tough season. Junior 190-pounder Bobby Shriner was the sole individual champion for UNC. Freshman Al Palacio finished second in the 118 class while sophomore John Aumiller captured second at 126 pounds.

Four wrestlers placed third. Junior co-captain Bill Gaffney finished third in the 167-pound class. Freshmen Randy Lowery, Chip McArtie, and Tony Lasandra finished third in the 142, 118, and heavyweight divisions, respectively.

This weekend also will be a test for Lam's young team. On Saturday at 7:30 p.m., the wrestlers will compete against each other in the annual Blue/White meet. This intra-squad match will be important for determining a starting lineup.

The match will pit Al Palacio against McArtie at 118 pounds. Bill Christie, a sophomore, will challenge Aumiller for the spot in the 126-pound class. At 134, junior Darren Phillips and freshman Kevin Jacoutot will battle it out. Lowery and fellow freshman Leo Palacio will wrestle for the opening at 142. Sophomore Scott Sanniota and freshman Tad Wilson will compete at 158. Tim Platt, a junior, and Matt King, a freshman, will wrestle in the 150 match.

Freshman Geoff Cramer will challenge Gaffney for his starting spot. Freshmen Burke Cessna and Tracey Davis will wrestle at 177. Stacey Davis will wrestle Shriner. And, at the heavyweight class, junior Tommy Gorry will wrestle Lasandra.

"Academic pressure and adjusting to the pressure of college life has really been tough," Lam said about his young performers. "We have had to hold out some wrestlers until second semester."

In conjunction with the Blue/White match, the Tar Heels will host the 10th Annual Fall Wrestling Clinic. Approximately 200 children and 50 coaches from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia are scheduled to attend.

Injuries may be factor in early-season test

The hunt to dethrone 1982's national champion Tar Heels begins Saturday at 2 p.m., when North Carolina opens the '82-'83 collegiate basketball season in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic against the St. John's Redmen.

And if there is any time to go in for the kill, this is it. The Tar Heels have been limping through the last four weeks of practice, plagued by one injury after another.

Michael Jordan broke his wrist, Sam Perkins sprained his knee. Backup big man Warren Martin suffered a stress fracture in his left foot, and no one knows when he'll be back. Freshmen Brad Daugherty and Curtis Hunter missed two weeks of practice because of pulled muscles.

But besides causing a lot of groaning, the collective sprains and pulls also cut down on the team's practice time together. And coach Dean Smith has yet to say who'll be taking over the forward spot vacated by Los Angeles Laker James Worthy. After last week's Blue-White Game, though, Smith said he wasn't sure whether Daugherty, sophomore John Brownlee, or junior Timo Makkonen have matured enough to contribute.

It just might be that Smith will go with a smaller lineup to start the season. He could move junior Matt Doherty to big forward and Jordan to small forward, and start either Hunter or sophomore Buzz Peterson in the backcourt with point guard Jim Braddock.

If the lineup is going to be small, it had better be tough. St. John's returned all five starters from the 21-9 squad that lost to Alabama in last year's NCAA tournament.

At 6-foot-6, pre-season All-American guard Chris Mullen comes back from a sparkling freshman campaign, where he sported a 16.6 points-per-game average and was named to the All-Big East second team.

Senior guard Bobby Kelly tossed out 139 assists — without him, coach Lou Carnesecca said, the Redmen would be in trouble.

In the frontcourt, Carnesecca can brag all day about All-American candidate David Russell and sharpshooter Billy Goodwin. Russell led the Redmen in scoring last year with a 17.4 average, popping for 54 percent from the field and grabbing 6.9 rebounds. And Goodwin came out with a 14.7 ppg., but always played better in the big games — 26 points against Villanova, a last-second shot to beat Boston College.

The only suspect spot in the St. John's lineup is at center, where 6-foot-10 Jeff Allen (4.3 ppg., 3.8 rebounds) and 7-foot Bill Wennington (3.2 ppg., 4.2 rebounds) are known for their non-aggressive style.

Don't expect any run-and-gun affair: both teams are known for their many strategies, and St. John's runs as many patterns as anyone in the country. There will be no shot clock, no three-point line.

And Carnesecca, with a 294-110 record, is used to winning. St. John's is a tradition-laden basketball school. If the Tar Heels can't get it all together by Saturday — injuries and all — the Hall of Fame Classic might prove for the Tar Heels a most dangerous game.

Alan Briggs, General Counsel with the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, said the academy would be wary of some specific points in the recommendations.

"We have some concerns about some of the specific concepts that are embodied," he said. "I think there are a lot of controversial proposals, without any question — the automatic confiscation of a license, for example."

In addition to the immediate 10-day revocation for driving with a 0.1 percent blood alcohol content, the task force proposed extending the period of license revocation from six to 12 months for refusing a Breathalyzer test.

Briggs said the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers would want to ensure that, "what we think are the fundamental rights of the individual are upheld."

One controversial proposal recommended that tavern owners selling alcohol to under-age or drunken people be charged with civil liability, he said.

Briggs said this would be like any case of negligence where there would have to be sufficient proof that the tavern owner was negligent.

"There are cases where I think we would agree that it is a valid question," he said, adding, "It's not an easy thing to prove at all."

Rick Choens, state field coordinator with the North Carolina Beer Wholesalers Association, said the lobby group was unprepared to make a statement.

"We're going to review the findings and decide then what we're going to do," he said. "There's no way we can evaluate something until we have time to review it."

Gov. Hunt a week ago said he would support the proposals in the 1983 General Assembly. He is expected to include his recommendations on drunken driving in a special message on crime, probably in February.

Under the Finance Committee's proposals, the paper would also return to the budgeting process. "It wouldn't be infringing on the responsibility of the DTH Board of Directors to ask them to come before us with the budget," Madison said. "The CGC won't be deciding on the budget, it's just approving it."

Finance Committee member Dan Bryson (District 18) said the paper's budget was "filled with frills" such as salaries for the editorial staff and parking stickers for some of the employees.

But Drescher said the DTH budget was lean. "It's a myth if anyone thinks that our budget has any frills in it at all," he said Thursday.

"We have six parking stickers. Four of them go to our full-time people, one goes to me and one goes to the photography editor, who has to have quick access in and out of the office."

Drescher also disagreed about student salaries. "Twice as much student funding goes to pay three Student Government salaries as goes to pay for the salaries of the entire DTH editorial staff," he said.

Although the CGC will have final approval of the DTH budget, it will not be able to lower the amount of fees the DTH receives.

"It wouldn't change the amount, but it could change the way that money's spent," Bryson said. "They could get more than 16 percent."
