Chinese restaurant to replace Blimpies

By SHARON SHERIDAN
Staff Writer

While UNC students were packing their suitcases in preparation for a Thanksgiving vacation at home, one local business was packing up for good. Students can no longer order submarine sandwiches from Blimpies. The business has closed, soon to be replaced by a Chinese restaurant.

"It's a good sale for me, and business is not what it used to be," Blimpies owner Neil Horwitz said last week. "They were not going bankrupt or losing money, the business was not making as much as it used to, Horwitz said. "It's just the right time to get out."

The new restaurant will open Dec. 17 or 27, depending on how long it takes to remodel the building, said one of the owners, Herbert Chu.

Offering Mandarin and Szechuan Chinese cuisines, the restaurant will be cafeteria-style, Chu said. Customers may eat in or take out the food.

Chu said he hopes to cater particularly to the students. He said the restaurant would be open from about 11 a.m.

until 9 p.m. to serve lunch and dinner, and that there are plans for a happy hour after 9 p.m., where drinks will be served with complimentary finger food.

Although there are several other Chinese restaurants in the area, Chu said he is not worried about competition. "The competition (is) only good for the consumer," he said. "I have confidence in myself."

Blimpies moved to the 118 E. Franklin Street location Aug. 29, 1980, said John Davis, director of Building Inspections for Chapel Hill. Blimpies was located in NCNB Plaza for several years before that.

Cross country teams make strides in New Jersey

By KATHY NORCROSS
and KURT ROSENBERG
Staff Writer

On a brisk, cool day in East Rutherford, N.J., imagine the horse racing track at the Meadowlands: deep dirt, thick grass, man-made hills and bales of hay. Imagine also a number of the nation's top female runners gathered to compete — runners such as TAC defending champion Julie Brown, American marathon record-holder Joan Benoit and former Olympian Jan Merrill. This is The Athletics Congress Cross Country Championships, the nationals for women both runners in and out of college.

Three women from North Carolina's cross country team ventured to the Garden State to compete in Sunday's 3.1 mile race. Freshman Madlyn Morrales finished somewhere between runners 60 and 62 with a time of 17:34. Holly Murray, another freshman, ran in the Junior Nationals, ages 14-18, and finished sixth with a time of 17:55.

And although her finish in the National Championships last week in Indiana was not all that she had hoped for, junior Joan Nesbit redeemed herself in the TAC meet.

In this race, which included more runners than the NCAAs, Nesbit finished No. 32. Her time of 16:51 was not only her personal best, but a new school record also. And Nesbit finally beat her rival, N.C. State's Connie Jo Robinson, who finished No. 33.

Nesbit almost decided not to run in the TAC meet. After her collapse at the NCAA finish line, she pondered over whether or not to compete. Yet Coach Don Lockerbie managed to convince her that she had one more race left in her.

"He knows me better than I know myself," Nesbit said.

The unusual course, which included jumping hay bales, did not bother Nesbit. In fact, this probably strengthened her performance.

"I used to be a hurdler in the ninth and 10th grades, I was very, very relaxed," she said. "It was the first time I felt like I was in control," Nesbit said. "It was a perfect ending."

Jeff Hyman could have easily have been intimidated. Running against people like Eamonn Coghlan, the world record-holder in the indoor mile, Henry Rono of Kenya and NCAA cross country champion Mark Scrutton was something he wasn't exactly used to.

It could have been even worse when the junior race at Sunday's TAC meet was canceled. But Hyman, who would have been running in the junior division, didn't have any qualms, outwardly at least, about competing in the same category with dozens of world class runners. Instead, he joked about being "cast into the treacherous and intense competition of the open class."

The freshman from Avon, Conn., used some intensity of his own. Despite a severe stomach cramp that he suffered between the fourth and fifth miles, Hyman ended his first season at North Carolina with one of his best races. He finished 170th in a field of more than 500 runners, in a time of 32:18.

After the cramp subsided at about five miles, Hyman felt strong; he estimated that within a half mile he passed between 25 and 30 people. Then, with 500 yards left, he was stricken with another cramp. Hyman can only wonder how much higher he would have finished had it not been for the cramps, since he was at his peak for the race.

"Overall, I've run better," he said, "but I was concentrating better than I ever have in a 10,000 meter race."

Which is impressive, considering the competition Hyman was up against. "I wasn't really nervous," he said. "I was more excited to be able to run in a race like that."

And Hyman is looking forward to returning to the TAC Championships next year. In 1983, though, he plans to leave the cramps at home.
