For the record

In Monday's story, "Computers simplify many tasks at UNC," John Cromartie was incorrectly identified as a research assistant working with computer graphics for the geology department. Cromartie works for the geography department.

Because of a proofreading error in the story titled "Robinson remembers Rev. King" (Monday, Jan. 17), The Daily Tar Heel incorrectly quoted Max Robinson as saying, "We've not only put (the philosophies) on the shelf, we have defied King." The word "defied" should have read "deified." The DTH regrets the errors.

BRIEFLY

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — An aide to Gov. Jim Hunt accused U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' political action committee of lying about Hunt in a radio advertisement Monday and said legal action may be taken.

The ad, aired on radio stations throughout the state, says Hunt opposes "workfare," or requiring able-bodied welfare recipients to work for their benefits. Hunt aides say he strongly supports workfare and has recommended it for North Carolina.

The ad was sponsored by the National Congressional Club, a political action committee based in Raleigh that has raised millions of dollars for conservative causes and candidates. Helms and Sen. John East, both R-N.C., are honorary co-chairmen.

Tom Fetzer, chief executive officer of the National Congressional Club, said in a telephone interview that the club "stands by the contents of the ad."

Spokeswoman Lynne Garrison said Hunt might issue a statement later.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The government rushed 4,200 soldiers into Morazan province Monday to try to roll back major gains by leftist guerrillas in the mountainous area of north-eastern El Salvador.

The guerrillas were reported advancing on San Francisco Gotera, the provincial capital, 102 miles northeast of San Salvador.

The province has long been a guerrilla stronghold. Rebels there started a drive toward the Morazan capital Jan. 8 as part of a new nationwide push for power in the 3-year-old civil war. They control 460 square miles of territory and 13 towns in the province, some of which they have held for three months.
