RALEIGH - Gov. Jim Hunt stood by his economic forecast for 1983-84 Thursday, despite legislative analysts who say his state revenue estimates may be $92 million too high.

"I simply am just a little more optimistic about how the thing is beginning to turn and the fact that North Carolina will be one of the states to lead this country out of the recession," Hunt said at his weekly news conference.

In the 1983-85 budget Hunt gave the Legislature Tuesday, he predicted the economy will pick up in 1983 and boost state tax revenues by 8.8 percent.

The next day, legislative analysts told lawmakers that the most recent data indicates the recovery will be later and slower. They forecast revenues will grow 7 percent, $92 million less, in the next fiscal year.

The difference between the forecasts is approximately equal to the amount of money needed for lifting the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries.

WASHINGTON --- The National Commission on Social Security Reform sent President Reagan on Thursday its $168 billion blueprint for pulling the system back from the brink of a financial crisis that threatens to delay retirees' checks this summer.

A majority also recommended gradually raising the normal retirement age from 65 to 66.

The change would be phased in one month a year so those born in 1949 or later would have to wait until age 66 to draw full Social Security benefits. The retirement age also eventually would go up automatically with any gains in life expectancy.

The centerpiece of the rescue plan is a six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase for Social Security's 36 million beneficiaries; higher payroll taxes in 1984, 1988 and 1989 for employees and employers; a permanently higher payroll tax on the self-employed starting in 1984; taxation of one-half of Social Security benefits for middle- and upper-income retirees; and bringing all new federal workers and non-profit groups into the system next year.

WASHINGTON - The Pentagon said Thursday there is a 2 percent chance that debris from a disabled nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellite will hit the United States after entering the atmosphere sometime between early Sunday and Monday afternoon.

Spokesman Henry Catto told reporters that experts have predicted the re-entry of the satellite, which carried a nuclear reactor into orbit, sometime between 1 a.m. EST Sunday and 3 p.m. EST Monday.

However, space experts said the Cosmos 1402, which has been tumbling toward earth at an ever-increasing rate, may plunge into the atmosphere late Sunday night.

WASHINGTON - The Air Force has disciplined several officers for hiring a topless dancer to perform at a pre-Christmas party in the Pentagon, a spokesman said today.

Capt. John Whitaker, the spokesman, said "appropriate action" had been taken against the officers, but he declined to go into detail because of what he said were strictures under the federal Privacy Act.

"There was a party in the tactical division of the deputy chief of staff for plans and operations in the Pentagon basement," the spokesman said. "The dancer was raid for out of personal funds."

Patrol cautions

With a winter storm moving across North Carolina, drivers should use caution when traveling on icy and snowy roads, Sgt. Cecil Wilkins of the North Carolina Highway Patrol said Thursday. "We notice the biggest problem is that people fail to decrease "We notice the biggest problem is their following distance," their speed and they fail to increase their following distance," said Wilkins, Traffic Safety Information Officer for Troop C. Inadequate stopping distance can cause people to have rear-end collisions and to run into ditches.

Master Officer Gregg Jarvies of the Chapel Hill Police Department said people also should consider taking alternate routes to their destinations to avoid hills or bad roads.

Drivers should stay calm and drive cautiously, Jarvies said.

"Some of the people don't know how to operate in inclement weather," he said. "Some of them get a false sense of security if the streets are clear." Cleared streets still will have patches of ice, the officer said.

If a driver hits an icy spot and starts skidding, he should take his foot off the accelerator and steer into the skid, Wilkins said.

The officers said drivers should take certain things with them if they do plan to drive, including shovels, warm clothing, a sleeping bag, and boards which could be used under tires to get out of a ditch.

Vehicles need to be in good working condition. "Wintertime is here," Wilkins said. "They should have winterized their vehicles."

Car owners should check their heaters, defrosters, windshield wipers and tires. They should also use antifreeze, snow tires and chains if possible, Wilkins said.

"They (chains) do give you added traction for the snow; they help you move," he said. "But you can't be solely dependent on them."

Additionally, Jarvies said, "They remember to get the snow off their windows but they forget their lights."

Wilkins said the highway patrol would "have all available officers patrolling the roads. But as many roads as we have, it's easy to miss someone."

Above all, he said, motorists should remember, "Safety comes first."

Animals upset local residents

A controversy about the presence of wild, exotic animals - such as leopards, tigers and bears - has arisen in the past few months, but the dispute is not centered in the heart of the African jungle and does not concern tribal statutes. The dispute exists right here in Orange County.

The controversy started last summer when two bears escaped from a Chapel Hill farm owned by Ted Green. The bears were safely recovered without incident. But, the fact they escaped prompted Green's neighbors to voice their concern at a meeting held by the Orange County Commissioners Tuesday night.

Lori Stephenson, a Chapel Hill resident who has rallied citizens and has formed the Orange County Citizens Against the Keeping of Wild Animals, said she wants the animals, which also include two leopards and two tigers, banned from Orange county.

"Please think about our children," Stephenson said to the board. "Why should we lock our children up and let a few people own dangerous animals. Our first concern is our children and our lives. Our second concern is the animals, and we don't think they are being properly cared for."

Ted Green, in defense of his animals, said he did not think his animals were a safety threat.

"I have got my cats in more than adequate housing," Green said. "My leopards are in a cage with a top on it. They have dens, platforms and plenty of room to exercise. I went through a lot of expense to cage my animals and keep them safe."

Stephenson presented the board with a petition with about 300 names and asked the board to consider the potential danger involved with keeping wild animals.

Stephenson and her supporters convinced the board that some measure had to be taken to prevent wild animals from roaming the county.

"Something needs to be done," Richard Whitted, commission chairman said. "It is the general consensus of the board that something needs to be done, whether it be regulation through an ordinance or a total ban."

Bill Sheffield, an attorney from Durham, presented an ordinance to the board. The ordinance sets strict guidelines for the containment of the animals. The guidelines call for unusually strong locks and two layers of fencing to keep the animals secure among other preventive measures.

Jack Griffith, associate professor of bacteriology at UNC said that Stephenson's fears were warranted but that preventive measures are a better solution to the problem.

"We are concerned with an ordinance that would ban all non-domesticated animals," Griffith said. "It (the banning ordinance) would affect animals used for experiments and smaller non-domesticated pets that are not considered dangerous."

The board will discuss the options available to them during the next few weeks and address the issue at their next meeting.
