UNC tunes up for ACCs in Athens, Ga.

By TRACY YOUNG Staff Writer

Last weekend's Southern Intercollegiate Championships in Athens, Ga. turned out much the way swim coach Frank Comfort was hoping it would.

The 15 UNC swimmers who traveled to the championships didn't shatter any records, but over half of them had their personal best times in the events they swam. The 10 Tar Heel men finished fifth out of 12 teams, while the five women finished sixth out of 12. Assistant coach Mike Rawleigh, who traveled with the swimmers, was pleased with their performances. "We had a lot of people do their personal best and that's what we're always looking for," Rawleigh said.

Comfort was also happy with the swimmers. He said that he feels more UNC swimmers would have been in the finals had some schools not brought their Eric Targgart finished second in the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2:09.48 and sixth in the 400-yard individual medley in 4:11.76. His time in the breaststroke was the best UNC time for the event this season. His time in the medley was the team's second best this season.

The two other Tar Heel swimmers who made it to the finals last weekend were Eric Wheeler, who finished sixth in the 200-yard freestyle (1:44.48), and Holly Williams, fourth in the 100-yard breaststroke (1:08.60) and fifth in the 200-yard breaststroke one final dual meet for the men, tonight at N.C. State. Comfort said that his men, ranked 17th nationally, should be able to win the meet.

If North Carolina should lose tonight, the men would end their regular season with an even 4-4

"In a sense, this is our most important dual meet of the year," Comfort said. "They've (State) won the conference for 12 years in a row and any time we compete against them we want to beat them.

"I told our team that I feel number one we can win the meet and number two it will go down to the last relay," he said. "We have to be prepared for a situation like this."

The ACC championships for the women begin Thursday at State, while the men's begin on Feb. 24 at

Standing between UNC and the ACCs right now is Pinone says revenge was no factor for 'Cats

The Associated Press

Was Villanova's 56-53 upset of top-ranked North Carolina based on revenge for last year's loss in the finals of the NCAA East Regional? It depends on which member of the 12th-ranked Wildcat team you talk to.

"Last year, I didn't play well against them," said Villanova guard Stewart Granger. "We begged Coach (Rollie) Massimino to play North Carolina. Once you get another chance, you can't refuse it. You've gotta come right at 'em."

The Wildcats charged straight at the Tar Heels, scoring the first seven points, taking a 10-point lead late in the second half, then using Dwayne McClain's three free throws in the closing minutes to end North Carolina's 18-game winning streak.

"No factor at all," said Villanova center John Pinone when asked about a revenge motive. "That was last year. We were just looking to get a big win." Dropping to 21-4, the Tar Heels must travel to Maryland, whose game with Duke was postponed this weekend because the Terrapins couldn't escape the big blizzard in the Northeast.

Georgia Tech is trying harder these days and win-

"Obviously, this was a great win for our program," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins, whose team climbed to 10-10 overall and 3-7 in the ACC and meets South Carolina on Wednesday. "I thought it had gotten away from us and we were going to lose."

Wake Forest is third in the conference at 5-3 and 15-6 overall. It will travel to Clemson on Wednesday. "It's a nice win for Georgia Tech," said Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy, hoping to get into the NCAA 43-42 victory, leaving both teams at 13-8. Dan Duff's free throws settled the issue for the Fighting Irish, but the Wolfpack had a chance to win when Terry Gannon fired up a 20-footer with time running out.

Forward Murray Jarman scored 19 points and Mark Campbell added 18 as Clemson held off South Carolina 86-81.

The Tigers led 64-63 with 9:16 left and fought off the Gamecocks with a six-point spurt to raise their record to 9-15. South Carolina, also hoping for an NCAA bid, fell to 15-7.

Campbell wasn't expected to see as much action at the point, but starter Mike Eppley suffered a knee injury four minutes into the game to change Clemson coach Bill Foster's strategy.

"We wanted to run," Foster said, "And we would have run a lot more, but without resting Campbell we just couldn't do it. Still, I thought we did a good job getting back on defense."

Tar Heels travel to Raleigh for state bragging rights

By ROBYN NORWOOD

Anytime North Carolina and N.C. State jog out for warm-ups on opposite ends of the court, it's an event. Intrastate rivalries will do that.

But consider this. N.C. State's women's basketball team is sitting on top of the ACC hill with only one conference loss. The Tar Heels are in a mad scramble for second, but they are the proud owners of the single Wolfpack defeat, a 68-66 upset in Chapel Hill

UNC is tied for 20th in this week's poll. Oddly enough, N.C. State is 18th in spite of the fact that Coach Jennifer Alley's Tar Heels won the only timethe teams have met this year. In fact, Alley's women have walked away victorious twice in a row, after suffering through a six-year drought against the Pack. So if Carolina-N.C. State clashes are always more than just games, what does that make tonight's 7:30 meeting in Raleigh, more than a game? Call it what you like. By any name it's the same. Tremendous. No, bigger. It's the key battle in the ACC war. It's the 15th round of the fight for state dominance. For State, it's a last chance to save face. For the Tar Heels, it's one more grab at the brass ring.

Linda Page did it all for the Wolfpack last month at Carmichael Auditorium. Once a "Face in the Crowd" for Sports Illustrated, she hit for a game-high 30 points. Problem was, she didn't get even a little help from her friends; no one else hit double digits.

Meanwhile, UNC was gathering in 21, 12 and 11 points from Tresa Brown, Kathy Crawford, and Henrietta Walls, respectively.

N.C. State got a way below-average showing from Angie Armstrong at guard, while Pam Leake and Pam Hammond turned in credible "I'll shoot if we can't get it inside" performances for Alley.

Shooting will be critical. Last time UNC took just one more shot, made just one more shot, and, you guessed it, won by - one shot.
