SECS, RHA ask for funds

By JOEL BROADWAY MARK STINNEFORD

The Campus Governing Council Finance Committee began the process of reviewing the budget requests of 34 student organizations seeking funding through the CGC for the 1983-84 fiscal year.

The Finance Committee will continue budget hearings through April 7.

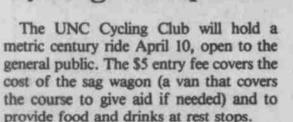

The Finance Committee opened by proposing that the Sexuality Education and Counseling Service receive $4,633 of $5,128 that the group requested for 1983-84. The committee proposed slightly reducing funds SECS had requested for office supplies, publications purchases and publicity for speakers.

"This is by no means a luxurious budget, but it will allow us to provide for the needs of students," said SECS staff member Nancy LaMere, responding to the committee's action.

The Finance Committee also proposed that the Residence Hall Association receive

$6,468 out of the $7,533 requested. Mark Dalton, who receives an $800 presidential scholarship as the president of

Campus Y expects 200 to participate in charity walk

By ASHLEY BLACKWELDER Staff Writer

This morning, while other UNC administrators are driving to work. Vice Chancellor of University Affairs Harold Wallace will be walking seven miles from Durham to Chapel Hill for work.

Though Wallace will be walking two days early, he is one of the expected 200 participants in the 15th annual Walk for Humanity, which begins 9 a.m. Saturday.

The walk, sponsored by the Campus Y, begins in front of the Y and continues for 10 miles through residential areas in Chapel Hill. The walk will raise money to be divided between three groups concerned with hunger and poverty, said Leigh Leutze, cochairman of the walk.

Of the profits from the walk, 60 percent will be equally divided between the American Friends Service, an international agriculture program aiding Laos, and the North

The remaining 40 percent of the funds will be donated to the Joint Orange-Chatham Community Action Incorporation, a local crisis relief organization which assists local needy families by supplying emergency food boxes and fuel logs.

"Walk for Humanity is a good way of getting people educated and involved in problems outside the campus," Leutze said. "Hopefully, we are going to initiate interest in the groups we have chosen beyond the student's participation in the walk."

Anyone may participate in the Walk for Humanity and interested persons may obtain a pledge card at the Campus Y office, Leutze said. Participants may register at 8 a.m. Saturday in front of the Y. Last year, 136 walkers raised over $3,000 in proceeds said Mark Joye, co-chairman of the walk. Half of those walkers were permanent Chapel Hill residents, Joye

"This year we're hoping to equal or better the amount of money collected last year," Joye said.

To spark enthusiasm in the event and add a sense of competition, the walk committee will award a plaque to the sorority, fraternity or residence college that raises the most money for the walk, Joye said.

"A secondary advantage of the walk is that the walk route is geared toward showing students areas of Chapel Hill that they might not have seen before," Joye said. "It allows students to vividly see the different socioeconomic areas of Chapel Hill."

Wallace said he was eager to participate in the walk. "Here's a chance for me to use my hobby to make a small contribution to raise the consciousness about world hunger," Wallace said.

Profits from Alexander Cabaret disappear Tuesday

A money box containing receipts from the Alexander residence hall Cabaret was stolen from the Great Hall of the Carolina Union Tuesday night, University Police said. "Alexander Cabaret" was a talent show held to raise money for this year's Springfest concert, said Mary Beth Cardin, an Alexander resident who worked on the talent committee.

Cardin, who said she was watching the

The amount stolen accounted for nearly half the proceeds from the event, she said.

Cardin said she and another woman had kept the money in the box while collecting. it. She told police that they had hidden the box under some coats beneath a table in the Great Hall.
