

BSM ball, 'Black Ink' funds cut

By MARK STINNEFORD

In a three-hour meeting on Saturday, the Campus Governing Council Finance Committee hashed out a budget proposal for the Black Student Movement.

The BSM had requested a Student Government appropriation of $14,575. The $11,515 appropriation proposed by the Finance Committee represents a 21 percent cut of the BSM request. Last year, the CGC appropriated $8,910 to the BSM.

The Finance Committee set the BSM's fund-raising quota at $4,100, bringing the proposed budget for the group to $15,615. The BSM is expected to raise the additional money through members' dues, social events and Black Ink advertising revenues.

Cuts proposed by the Finance Committee included elimination of funding for the Coronation Ball. The ball, scheduled for Homecoming Saturday, was designed to mark the crowning of Miss Black Student Movement, BSM President Sherrod Banks said.

Blacks will feel alienated from Homecoming events if the ball cannot be held, Banks said.

"The Coronation Ball was our Homecoming activity," Banks said. "It seems a shame for us to be students here and not be able to celebrate Homecoming here."

Committee member Greg Hecht (District 15) suggested that the BSM seek funding for the ball through the Carolina Athletic Association, the organization that coordinates Homecoming.

Funding the ball would be inappropriate because it is "almost a purely social event," said committee member Fred Baker (District 9).

The bill regulating the CGC budget process prohibits the funding of groups of a political, religious or social nature. However, CGC Finance Committee Chairperson Doc Droze (District 22) instructed committee members to judge the Coronation Ball on its merits and let the full CGC determine whether the event was a social activity.

The Finance Committee proposed a budget of $7,525 for the BSM newspaper, the Black Ink, cutting $1,000 from the BSM request. Because of the cut, the Black Ink will probably have to reduce its planned number of issues from 17 to 15, said Gwen Hailey, associate editor of the newspaper.

Committee member Jack Mohr (District 23) said the Black Ink could more than make up for the $1,000 cut and produce a full 17 issues if the paper had its own staff perform paste-up of the typeset columns of the paper rather than having a printing company do it.

Mohr repeatedly asked Hailey why the Black Ink couldn't paste up its own layouts when other campus publications do so.

The Black Ink could save $100 per issue by doing its own paste-up, but such a move would add strains to an already overworked staff, Hailey said.

The Finance Committee left virtually untouched the budget requests of the three BSM subgroups, proposing the Gospel Choir receive $1,700, the Opeyo Dancers receive $680 and the Ebony Readers receive $230.

In response to a question from Randall Parker (District 14), Gospel Choir director Fletcher Gamble said his organization was cultural, not religious, in nature.

"When you consider the types of music within black culture — rock, soul and others — most of them have their roots in gospel," Gamble said.

Droze reminded the members of the committee again that a determination of whether groups are social, religious or political in nature should be left to the full CGC.

The committee recommended approval of the entire $1,100 the BSM requested for The Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration and the $1,540 the group requested for the Black Arts Festival.

Banks said that overall he was pleased with the results of the hearing.

"They were as open-minded as they could be and acted out of fairness," Banks said.

CGC slices own budget 14 percent

The Campus Governing Council Finance Committee turned its budget-cutting knives inward Saturday.

The committee proposed slashing 14 percent from the council's office budget for the 1983-84 fiscal year, cutting the CGC request from $1,400 to $1,200.

"Listen up. This is downright important stuff," CGC Speaker James Exum said in presenting the budget request.

Several members stated that the CGC had unnecessarily padded its budget by requesting $200 for use of the University's computer system. The committee eliminated the request, ruling that the CGC could get free computer time by making use of a personal computer the committee suggested be purchased for the Student Consumer Action Union.

The largest portion of the CGC's budget — 54 percent — would go to pay the $650 annual salary of the council's secretary, Exum said. The Finance Committee also proposed $200 for printing and publicity and $350 for office supplies.

"Well, there goes the speaker's slash fund," Exum said, responding to the proposed cuts.

The Finance Committee will be considering the funding requests of 34 student organizations through April 7. Organizations have made budget requests of about $360,000, while the committee should have from $260,000 to $290,000 to allocate, said Doc Droze, committee chairperson.

SCAU, 'Phoenix' get top CGC funding

By JOEL BROADWAY

In the largest appropriation to date, the Campus Governing Council Friday night proposed a $19,949 allocation of Student Government funds for the Student Consumer Action Union.

An additional $5,600 was proposed in capital expenditures for an IBM personal computer, which will be purchased by SCAU and made available to all Student Government-funded organizations.

The Finance Committee also approved the publication of 7,500 copies of The Franklin Street Gourmet, a review of all the area's eating establishments. The total cost of printing and publicity for SCAU's publications, including 6,000 copies of an automotive and transportation guide and 8,000 copies of an apartment guide, The Southern Part of Heaven will be $15,192. In the second largest appropriation of the five days of hearings, The Phoenix received the necessary funding from the CGC Finance Committee to expand into a 16-page weekly newspaper next fall.

The Finance Committee proposed $17,610 in student government appropriations for The Phoenix, cutting their $20,815 request by 15 percent in the Friday afternoon hearing.

The committee and The Phoenix staff agreed that the expanded version should generate more income in terms of advertising revenues.

John Maxwell, business manager of The Phoenix, explained that the problems in generating advertising revenues had developed into a "vicious circle."

"If the paper doesn't look good, it's harder to distribute, and the advertisers aren't pleased," he explained.

While advertising in The Phoenix has suffered from some disorganization, Maxwell said, national advertising has decreased significantly.

The Phoenix, which has a circulation of 12,000, plans to mail copies of their orientation issue to alumni, past UNC professors and other newspapers in an effort to sell subscriptions, Phoenix representatives said.

Last year, The Phoenix received $14,174 in Student Government appropriations.

According to Finance Committee Chairperson Doc Droze (District 22), $83,609 has been allocated to date, with total cuts of $14,065 made in the budget process.

Michael Jordan stared straight at the ground when the team emerged from its bus Sunday evening.

University police expected a large turnout for the team's return from the airport.

"We'll block off the area if it gets crowded," said Sgt. Leon Ivey. However, it never became necessary for police to do so.

Chapel Hill Police also expected more people to congregate on Franklin Street to mourn the loss, said Maj. Arnold Gold.

Despite the gloom and despair of the day, Rachel Kolman, a freshman from Chapel Hill, said, "Carolina will always be No. 1 in my heart."
