Perry reinstated in appeals process

By BILL RIEDY

Russell Perry, who was dismissed as associate director of operations for the department of University housing in mid-April regained his job Monday.

Perry was reinstated through the University's grievance procedure. He said his reinstatement was effective Monday morning following a meeting with Jody Harpster, acting director of University housing. He also said that he would receive back pay from April 20, the day after his dismissal.

Perry said he received notice of his dismissal from Harpster on April 18. Harpster had asked him to resign after accusations of misconduct, but Perry refused and was dismissed effective 5 p.m. April 19.

The N.C. Landmark published an article in mid-April which stated that Perry had allowed a University employee to use a shop planer for personal use.

Perry claimed that he did not violate any University policy and began his appeal to regain his position shortly after his dismissal.

The appeals process involves four steps, the first of which is an appeal to the employee's immediate supervisor. An employee may then appeal to the personnel department, then to a chancellor's grievance committee and finally to a hearing officer from the State Personnel Commission who can make recommendations to the full commission. The commission then makes a binding decision.

Perry said he had appealed to Harpster, his supervisor in the housing department, who was required to make a decision in 10 working days. Perry declined to say at which step in the process he was reinstated.

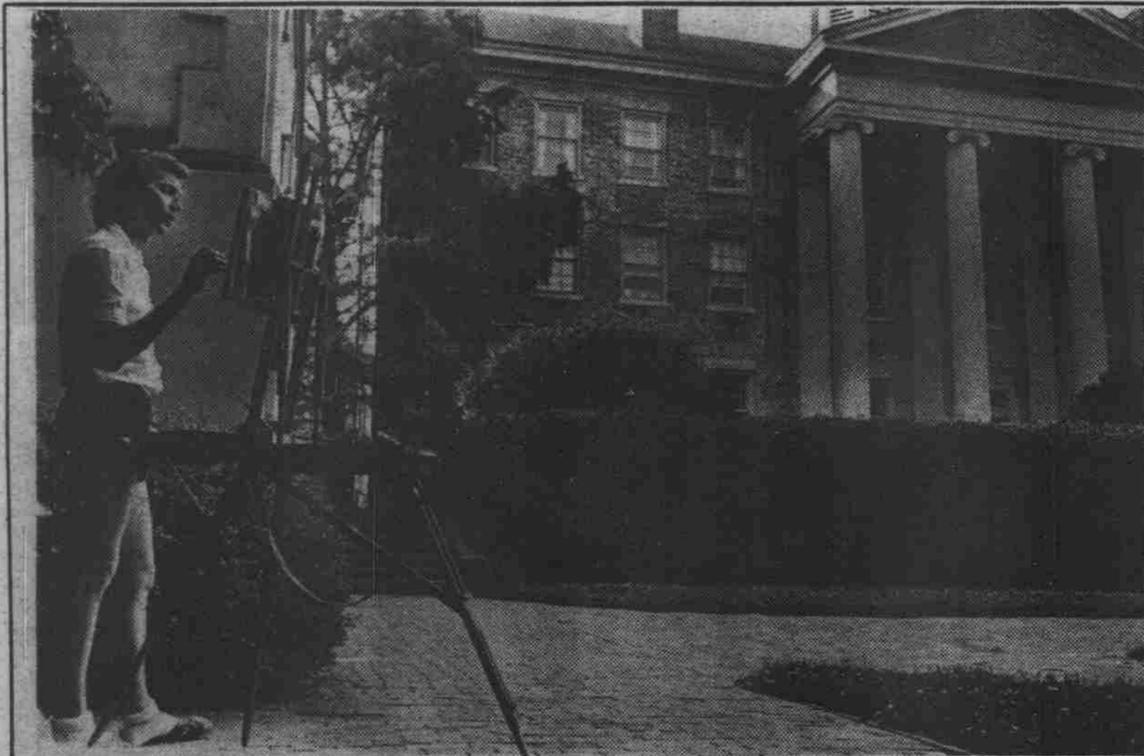

Harpster could not be reached for comment Tuesday on the decision. However, The Chapel

Hill Newspaper reported Monday that Harpster had confirmed Perry's reinstatement but would not comment further, citing confidentiality in personnel matters required by state law.

"Since the founding of the University there has never been an employee fired for loaning or borrowing equipment," Perry said. He added that employees frequently borrow University equipment for personal use.

Perry also said that two publications, the State Personnel Administrative Guide and a handbook that all employees receive, state

House passes MX funding, testing bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—In a major victory for President Reagan, the Democratic-controlled House voted 239-186 Tuesday to spend $625 million for development and flight-testing of the MX missile.

The resolution releasing funds voted last year goes to the Senate where similar approval was expected Wednesday.

Critics said the MX, to be based in underground Minuteman silos, would be a "sitting duck" for destruction by Soviet missiles. Supporters said the MX is essential to counter a new generation of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles which they said would upset the balance of nuclear power. MX opponents said the fight was far from over.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, the Senate Finance Committee voted 11-5 to go along with the administration's request to increase the national debt limit to nearly $1.4 trillion.

On an 11-7 vote, the committee also approved Reagan's bill providing federal tax credits for parents of private school pupils, a plan opponents said will create a dual system of education.

In House committee action, the Energy and Commerce Committee approved legislation creating a federal-state health insurance program for the unemployed. The vote was 34-8.

Reacting to administration veto threats, the House Appropriations Committee trimmed $240 million from the first 1984 appropriations bill. The $14.29 billion bill appropriates money for the Energy Department and other agencies.

Garrow: Appeals process will continue

David J. Garrow, an assistant professor in the UNC political science department, will continue his struggle to be reappointed to the faculty before the Faculty Hearings Committee on June 22 and 23.

Garrow's appeal to David H. Moreau, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, was turned down when Moreau upheld political science department Chairman James W. Prothro's decision not to reappoint Garrow when his contract expires in 1984, Garrow said Monday.

Garrow said that Moreau's three-page letter dated April 29 stated that Moreau was not exercising qualitative judgments on Garrow's work, but that he did not have any particular evidence for reversing Prothro's decision.

"I'm disappointed by Moreau's upholding of Prothro, but I still would like to remain at UNC," Garrow said.

Moreau declined to comment on the issue, citing state statutes which prohibit the discussion of confidential personnel matters.

Prothro's decision not to reappoint Garrow was based on a faculty vote, 10-9, March 21 against the reappointment.

In a letter to Garrow dated March 23, Prothro stated that the recommendation not to reappoint Garrow was based on an insufficient level of scholarship shown in Garrow's work and that his work is not in the subfield of public law.

Garrow has written two books dealing with the civil rights movement: The FBI and Martin Luther King, Jr.: From 'Solo' to Memphis and
