Durham Nightlife

City's cultural attractions surprising

There are three places in Durham that until now may have escaped your attention. If you find some free time on your hands during second session, you are likely to enjoy a visit to one or all three places.

Many people are unaware of what Durham has to offer on a cultural level. The Durham Life and Science Museum is both visually and educationally stimulating. Unique to museums in the area (and most likely in the South) is a truly amazing dinosaur exhibition. A walking trail on the museum grounds leads its visitors to another place and time (prehistoric Earth). Model dinosaurs and other wildlife of the period are realistically placed along the path, giving people the feeling that they really have been transported back in time.

The museum is also nationally recognized for its space exhibit, and it is said to rival the Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

Duke Campus is known for its beauty and splendor, and the Sarah P. Duke Memorial Gardens is a "must-see" on your next tour of the campus. The gardens are designed for and welcome people. They're ideal for long, leisurely walks and picnics by the goldfish pond.

Possibly the most famous summer dance festival in the world, the American Dance Festival, is presently being hosted by Duke University. Through July 23, dance lovers can see a very special selection of ballet including performances by the Ballet Theatre de L'Arche from Paris and Lyon. Also included as "the biggest surprise" according to ADF director Charles Reinhart, are the Compaigne de Danse L'Esquisse and the Compaigne Kariine Saporta. Both companies are universally known for their innovative choreography.
