middle zone of most fees, Friday said. Although the Legislature just approved a bill enabling itself to set the priorities of BOG spending, Friday said he does not believe this will disrupt the process of the 32-member board.

"It is factual to say they can set priorities on the budget," Friday said this will mainly affect the capital improvements made in the 16-university system.

"They did not invade the operating budget," he said.

"We want to make them feel comfortable in the new academic environment and help them to find things that they're interested in outside of the classroom," Wulfhurst said.

Clery, Wulfhurst and Layton agreed that the reason the operation had been successful so far was because of all the help they had received from students, the faculty and the community.

"UNC is one of the few college campuses that has an all volunteer program for orientation," Clery said. "It's been great how everyone has been willing to help."

But the real enthusiasm could be seen last Saturday as future students pretended to adapt to being in college.

"I can't wait," said one incoming freshman as he watched the flurry of college activity. "I'm looking forward to being on my own and meeting new people in a different setting. Carolina is a childhood dream come true for me."
