

GOP adopts conservative platform

The Associated Press

DALLAS Republicans, fired by partisan portrayals of Walter F. Mondale as the overpromising candidate of the past, met Tuesday to provide President Reagan with a conservative, "red, white and blue" re-election platform.

The GOP national convention, dominated by the party's right, wasn't even to hear moderate dissent about a document that includes a "no tax hike" promise and language that the United States must be able to prevail in any future war.

After the conservatives saw their views adopted Monday night, the prime time spotlight shifted to party moderates led by former President Gerald Ford.

In his speech, Ford continued the attacks on Mondale by comparing economic conditions during the Carter administration with the state of the economy today.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush met with a group from New Jersey and a gathering of senior citizens after similar appearances Monday before women, blacks and Jews.

DALLAS — Congressional candidate Bill Cobey told the Republican National Convention Monday in a 90-second address that he

News in Brief

Cobey, a former UNC athletic director from Chapel Hill, is trying to unseat six-term incumbent Ike Andrews, a Democrat from Cary, in the 4th Congressional District. Andrews defeated Cobey with 51.3 percent of the vote in 1982 after Andrew's conviction for drunken driving.

Cobey told delegates that the 1903 flight of a power-driven aircraft in North Carolina by Wilbur and Orville Wright is a reminder of "what determination, a brave vision and the pioneer spirit have accomplished for America and the world."

He said that spirit remains alive in scientists working in the state's 4th District, which includes part of the Research Triangle Area.

More questions for Ferraro

ALBANY, N.Y. — The New York state Insurance Department will ask Rep. Geraldine Ferraro and her husband John Zaccaro why they omitted information about a federal campaign law violation from statements filed with the department, an official said Tuesday. However, the department will not attempt to take disciplinary action against the Democratic vice presidential candidate or Zaccaro for failing to mention the violation because "we consider this a minor matter," said Insurance Department spokesman Kevin Foley.

Foley said that in signed application filed in 1979, 1981 and 1983 for an extension of the insurance broker's license for the New York City real estate company owned by the couple, Ms. Ferraro and Zaccaro answered "no" to questions about violation of law.

MacDonald's judge asked to withdraw

RALEIGH — Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's lawyer Tuesday asked U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree to remove himself from MacDonald's case because the judge's relative worked for MacDonald's former prosecutor, but Dupree refused to withdraw.

Dupree has presided over the case since 1975. MacDonald is a former Army captain convicted in 1979 of slaying his pregnant wife and two young daughters at their Fort Bragg apartment in 1970. MacDonald is seeking a new trial.

Raleigh lawyer Wade Smith argued that Dupree shouldn't deal further with the case because his former son-in-law was a member of the U.S. Attorney's staff when it investigated the case in the early 1970s.
