

Soviet vessels gather at KAL site

The Associated Press

Navy officials said Soviet vessels massed Sunday in the area where the South Korean airliner went down, and police said Japanese searchers found a second mutilated body, other body fragments, and an ID card of a Canadian woman passenger.

Authorities in Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, said 17 patrol boats, seven aircraft and about 400 people on the ground were mobilized to comb the island's seas and beaches as currents pushed by strong winds moved debris toward the Japanese shore on the Sea of Okhotsk.

Japanese Maritime Safety Agency officials in Wakkanai, on the northern tip of Hokkaido, said at least 55 Soviet vessels gathered in waters where the airliner is believed to have gone down.

"The Russians could have found some bulky object," commented one official.

The 12,000-ton Soviet salvage vessel Mikhail Rudnitsky, guarded by the 8,200-ton missile cruiser Petropavlovsk, was among the vessels, the officials said.

The 720-ton Soviet intelligence ship, Okean, was seen throwing two cables from its stern into the sea, but it was unclear if the exact crash site or any plane wreckage had been discovered, the agency officials said.

A Soviet fighter-jet shot down the Korean Air Lines plane, en route from New York to Seoul, Sept. 1 in Soviet airspace near the island of Sakhalin, about 25 miles north of Hokkaido. All 269 people aboard the jumbo jet are presumed dead. Meanwhile in Washington, the United States on Sunday revised its version of a Soviet pilot's radio transmissions to indicate he fired his cannon — possibly the warning shots the Soviets insist were fired — nearly six minutes before he used a missile to down an airliner with 269 people aboard.

A minute and a half later the attacking Soviet pilot noticed the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 jetliner was decreasing speed, but there is no indication that was meant as a signal to Soviet interceptors or that the Korean crew was considering making a forced landing.

The State Department issued a written statement without elaboration that contended its reinterpretation of the Soviets' air-to-ground communications "reinforces our belief that the totality of the events remains exactly as stated by the U.S. and Japan." Japan monitored the transmission when the plane was shot down Sept. 1.

"The evidence indicates that the (Korean Air Lines) pilot was totally unaware of the fact he was off course, that he was intercepted by Soviet fighters or that any warnings — visual, radio, gunfire — were given," the State Department said.

At the White House, where an earlier translation of the Soviet communications was released on Tuesday, President Reagan's principal spokesman Larry Speakes could not be reached for comment. The press duty officer, Kim Hoggard, said: "The White House doesn't have anything to add to it or clarify it with."

Moscow has acknowledged destroying the airliner, but claims the civilian plane was on a spy mission for the United States. Washington has rejected that claim.

The Maritime Agency officials said Soviet ships were operating off the Soviet island Moneron, near Sakhalin. The Soviet Union has refused to allow Japanese search boats into its territorial waters.

Police said the ID card of a 25-year-old Canadian woman, Mary Jane Hendrie of Ottawa, washed ashore in Monbetsu, about 120 miles southeast of here. Hendrie was one of 10 Canadians on the KAL flight's passenger list.

Police in Abashiri, 150 miles southeast of Wakkanai and about 190 miles southeast of the suspected crash site, said a man fishing early Sunday had discovered a faceless body. Authorities identified it as the remains of a white woman by a lock of auburn hair on the back of the head, but were unable to confirm whether the person had been a passenger with KAL.

Two segments of flesh were found near or west of Monbetsu, they said.

On Thursday, the body of a child was recovered along the same coast. It still has not been identified. That body and other remains will be examined at medical facilities in Asahikawa, a city in central Hokkaido, as well as at the prefectural capital of Sapporo, police said.

By Sunday evening, search operations had turned up 198 new items that possibly came from the destroyed Korean airliner, bringing to 368 the number recovered since debris started drifting ashore on Thursday, one week after the plane went down.

WASHINGTON — The world's economic picture remains murky because of the severe debt crisis among poorer countries and threats of restrictive trade sanctions by industrialized nations enjoying economic recovery, the International Monetary Fund said Sunday.

The IMF also said in its annual report that "the most pressing task" facing the world's leaders is to ensure that the recovery continues at a low-inflation pace and spreads to the poorer countries.

But, the report warned, the strength and durability of the economic upturn are threatened by enormous budget deficits in the United States, which can put upward pressure on interest rates.

"It will... be vital to bring fiscal situations in the larger industrial countries, and particularly in the United States, into better balance," the study by the 146-member IMF said.

VIENNA, Austria — Pope John Paul II on Sunday appealed to the superpowers to negotiate for peace in good faith, and denounced "deceitful cunning, falsehood and intrigue" in international diplomacy.

The pope's remarks to the Vienna diplomatic corps came on the second day of his Austrian visit after a week in which the United States and the Soviet Union exchanged bitter accusations about the Soviet attack on a South Korean jetliner that left 269 people dead.

The speech also followed the Sept. 6 resumption of the Geneva talks between the superpowers on reduction of nuclear arms in Europe. The pope said: "Thus today — perhaps more urgently than in the past — we need the courageous and steadfast efforts of a skilled diplomacy which attempts with patience and perseverance to confront the voice of violence with the voice of reason, to alleviate existing tensions and to always keep the door open for dialogue, so that man's call for peace will not one day be suddenly smothered in the noise of weapons."

GUATEMALA CITY — Government troops killed 28 leftist guerrillas and freed 58 peasants at a rebel-run "concentration camp" in a remote northwestern province, the army reported Saturday.

A brief statement from the army press office said the guerrillas were slain Wednesday in a gun battle with soldiers who discovered their camp near Uspantán, 167 miles northwest of Guatemala City.

"Military patrols that participated in the operation discovered a sort of concentration camp in the area where they (the guerrillas) were holding the peasants prisoner," the statement said.

It said the prisoners had been "obligated to carry out forced labor for the subversive delinquents."

GREENSBORO — Robert L. Hannon offered a platform of racial and sexual equality and better housing and health care in announcing his bid for the 1984 governor's race.

"I'm planning for the runoff," Hannon, who made unsuccessful bids for lieutenant governor and a U.S. Senate seat, announced Friday night. "I think I've got the primary locked up. But the runoff might be tight."

"I stand for and will support all policies, practices and programs designed to improve the quality of life of blacks, the poor and our society as a whole," said the 68-year-old Hannon, a former teacher and administrator at Fayetteville State University.
