

U.S. demands compensation for victims as third body is discovered

The Associated Press

The United States demanded compensation from the Soviet Union Monday for the 61 Americans killed in the Soviet destruction of a South Korean airliner as a pilots' boycott of flights to Moscow took hold in Europe and NATO governments prepared to bar Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, from their airports.

At the United Nations, the Soviet Union vetoed a Security Council resolution that would have deplored its action in shooting down the jumbo jet. Poland joined the Soviet Union in opposing the resolution, four of the 15 council members abstained and nine voted for the measure.

Meanwhile, a third body believed to be from the downed jumbo jet was found on Japan's northernmost coast, and the Kyodo news agency reported the plane did not crash for more than 12 minutes after one or more of its four engines was hit by a heat-seeking missile from a Soviet fighter.

The U.S. demand for compensation was presented in Washington by John H. Kelley, an acting assistant secretary of state, to Oleg Sokolov, second-ranking member of the Soviet Embassy staff, but Sokolov refused to accept it.

Kelley also tried to give Sokolov a note on behalf of the South Korean government demanding compensation for its citizens who were killed, but Sokolov rejected it also.

State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the United States would "continue to press the Soviets to meet their clear obligation under international law to pay compensation to both the United States and Korea."

The U.S. Embassy in Ottawa also refused last week to accept the Canadian government's claim for compensation for the 10 Canadians among the 269 victims, Foreign Secretary Allan MacEachen told the Canadian Parliament, but the demand was delivered to the Foreign Ministry in Moscow.

MacEachen said Canadian representatives would push the claim aggressively in Moscow and in such international forums as the United Nations and the International Civil Aviation Authority in Montreal later this week. He added that, in the past, Canada has waited up to two years for the Soviets even to answer a diplomatic note.

The pilots' ban, begun Friday in Britain, was joined by pilots in Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Spain and Sweden, cancelling 14 of the 27 weekly flights into Moscow from NATO countries.

Pilots of Air France, which operates six flights a week, were to join today, and the West German Lufthansa, which operates the remaining seven, said these would be halted Thursday.

But the government of neutral Switzerland delayed deciding whether Swissair pilots could suspend their four weekly flights to the Soviet capital, and Finland's state railway began adding extra passenger cars to its two daily trains to the Soviet Union.

Most of the pilots were observing a 60-day boycott agreed to Sept. 6 by officials of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations.

Thirteen of the 16 NATO governments began calling in Soviet ambassadors to inform them that they would refuse landing permission to Aeroflot for two weeks starting Thursday.

But three members of the alliance — France, Greece and Turkey — refused to take part, and the Danish pilots' association proposed that the pilots' boycott be reduced to two weeks also. It said a two-month boycott "primarily will hurt Western airlines, and it could jeopardize Soviet route allocations."

Japan, which banned Aeroflot charter flights Sept. 9, was preparing to join in the ban on all Soviet flights, Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe told the visiting Irish foreign minister, Peter Barry.

The U.N. Security Council was meeting in New York to vote on an American resolution condemning the Soviet attack. It was not certain the United States could muster a majority vote in favor of the resolution, and even if it did, the Soviets were certain to veto it.

As more than 1,000 police combed the northern coast of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island, gale winds washed ashore a headless body in such condition that even its sex could not be determined. It was found near Monbetsu, 160 miles southeast of where the airliner is believed to have crashed into the sea Sept. 1 off the Soviet island of Sakhalin.

Since Sept. 8, police and fishermen have found the body of a child, the torso of a Caucasian woman, five chunks of human flesh and more than 450 pieces of clothing, wreckage and other items believed to have come from the plane, including identification cards for two passengers, Mary Jane Hendrie of Ottawa, Canada, and Chang Ma-son of Taiwan.

Twenty-three Japanese ships and nine planes are searching the waters between Hokkaido and Sakhalin, while 10 Soviet ships including a guided-missile cruiser are searching the area where the plane went down.

Construction on Rosemary blocks traffic

Rosemary Street will be partially obstructed between Henderson and Hillsborough streets for up to one and a half months due to street construction.

The east end of the street is completely blocked off between Henderson and Hillsborough streets. Local traffic can come onto Rosemary Street from Hillsborough Street. Harold Harris, director of public works for Chapel Hill, estimated that one-way traffic on Rosemary would be initiated during day-time hours by Wednesday or Friday. Two-way traffic will then be permitted only at night.

The street reconstruction, which involves putting down new pavement and curbing gutters, will make that section of Rosemary "look like a new street," Harris said.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The destruction of Korean Air Lines Flight 007 had Congress in a bitter, anti-Soviet mood as it returned on Monday from a five-week summer recess, and leaders of both parties agreed that President Reagan is now far more likely to get his way on defense issues.

In the Senate, Republican and Democratic leaders united behind a resolution condemning the Soviet Union for "a cold-blooded attack on a commercial airliner," and "a barbaric action" which "will rank among one of the most infamous and reprehensible acts of aviation history."

The resolution was likely to be approved unanimously Wednesday. Similar action was probable in the Democratic House later in the week.

The Senate version urges further U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union unless it apologizes for shooting down the Boeing 747 jumbo jet and pays compensation to the families of all 269 people who perished, including Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., and 60 other Americans.

The State Department disclosed Monday that two Soviet diplomats were expelled from the United States last month as alleged spies, and charged that a U.S. diplomat expelled Monday from the Soviet Union had been mistreated.

The two Soviets were identified as Yuri Petrovich Leonov, an assistant air attaché at the embassy here, and Anatoly Yevgenyevich Skripko, another attaché at the embassy. Both were declared persona non grata "for engaging in espionage," said Alan Romberg, a State Department spokesman.

Skripko was declared persona non grata on Aug. 17. The action against Leonov was taken two days later.

A State Department official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the decision to announce the expulsions was made because the Soviets disclosed the expulsion of a U.S. diplomat, Lon David Augustenborg, on spying charges.

The Soviet security policy said Vice Consul Augustenborg and his wife,

Denise, were detained in the Leningrad area Sunday "as they were carrying out an act of espionage." It was the third reported case of alleged spying by U.S. diplomats in the Soviet Union this year.

But U.S. officials in Washington indicated the expulsion was retaliatory. State Department spokesman Alan Romberg told reporters that Washington was "vigorously protesting the physical mistreatment" of Augustenborg. He declined to say whether the diplomat was injured in the incident, and would not provide any details.

ST. LOUIS — The biggest walkout of the new school year ended Monday when a union representing 2,700 St. Louis teachers agreed to send them back to work without a settlement, hours after the school board began hiring replacements for strikers.

Superintendent Jerome B. Jones said both sides had agreed to return to the bargaining table today and that teachers agreed to go back to work the same day after a four-day strike.

"The school board does not have any more money than it did last week," Jones told reporters. "But the strike is over. We are going back to the table so we can redefine our positions to end this thing."

Evelyn Battle White, president of the American Federation of Teachers Local 420, denied that the strike collapsed under the firing threat.

WASHINGTON — Former Sen. George McGovern, starting months behind his rivals and spurning the advice of many loyal former aides, plans to announce today that he will run again for the Democratic presidential nomination he won more than a decade ago.

"He's going to announce that he's going to run," said Mary McGovern, daughter of the former South Dakota senator and deputy manager for the new campaign.

It will be McGovern's third try at the nomination. He lost in 1968 but won four years later, a liberal candidate who then was buried beneath Richard M. Nixon's landslide re-election. McGovern carried only Massachusetts and the District of Columbia in the 1972 general election, the worst Democratic defeat in American history.

"When I lost in 1972, they said I was 10 years ahead of my time," he said late last year when he disclosed he was considering another try. "Well, it's 10 years later."

WASHINGTON — Dry, blistering heat has cut further into this fall's corn harvest, likely to be the smallest since 1970 and barely over half of last year's record crop of 8.4 billion bushels, the Agriculture Department said Monday. That almost surely means another nudge in 1984 food prices.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block estimated consumer food costs will rise an additional 1 to 1.5 percent next year because of the severely reduced crop. That comes on top of a previously estimated food price boost of between 4 and 5 percent — meaning an overall jump of as much as 6.5 percent next year.

As for the impact of the drought on farmers, Block called it "staggering," but he offered no specific dollar figure. After last month's crop report, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration placed the crop loss nationwide at $7 billion.

RALEIGH — An improving economy appears to be the main reason murder, arson and property crime in North Carolina fell significantly during the first six months of the year, the attorney general reported Monday.

Overall, reported crime in the state declined 7 percent, compared to the first six months of 1982, state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said in a prepared statement. The decrease is the largest since 1978, he added.

"The fact that both violent crimes and property crimes declined during the period covered by the report shows that the entire criminal justice system is doing a better job of protecting our people," commented Gov. Jim Hunt.

The FBI announced on Sunday that crime was down 4 percent nationally in 1982.
