Conservatives denounce response

WASHINGTON - Prominent conservatives, denouncing President Reagan's response to the shooting down of a Korean airliner as "incredibly inadequate," appear sharply divided over whether to abandon their support of the president as the 1984 campaign approaches.

Some leaders of the New Right - notably Richard Viguerie and Howard Phillips - say they want to dump Reagan in favor of a more conservative presidential candidate, even though they acknowlege such a campaign is futile.

But there are indications that the president's political right flank is holding, despite the conservatives spoken disappointment.

Not a single conservative Republican in the House or Senate, many of whom favor stronger anti-Soviet steps in response to the downing of the plane, has broken with Reagan politically over the issue. Any challenger to Reagan would likely come from Congress, and aides to the Republican leadership in both the House and Senate say they have not heard any talk along those lines.

Any many conservatives point out that a challenge to Reagan would increase the election chances of the Democratic candidate next year, and that all the contenders for the party's nomination are more liberal than Reagan. The National Conservative Political Action Committee is proceeding with its planned multi-million dollar campaign to secure Reagan's re-election.

"He is the most articulate, most charming, most aggressive conservative we've had, possibly since Theodore Roosevelt," said Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and one of the more conservative members of the House.

"There's no reason to waste our energies on an internal civil war," added Gingrich, one of many Republicans who say they wish Reagan had taken stronger actions in protest of the Russian decision to shoot down the Korean plane.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., a veteran conservative in the House, is on record for tough sanctions against Russia, including an embargo on high technology goods and expulsion of many Soviet diplomats. Even so, says a spokesman, "He hopes he'll (Reagan) run for re-election and he'll support him."

Many conservatives have been disappointed with Reagan for some months, believing his presidency has not satisfied their own national agenda. But their displeasure deepended as Reagan has reacted to the shooting down of a Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard, including Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

So far, Reagan has demanded an explanation and reparation payments from the Russians, but his main action against the Soviet government has been to severely curtail operations of, Aeroflot, the Russian airline.

The anti-Reagan rhetoric is roughest among conservatives who are not elected politicians in their own right.

"It's clear that just about every conservative I know thinks that Reagan's response is incredibly inadequate to the challenge," says Phillips, head of the Conservative Caucus. "It's less than we would expect from Jimmy Carter.

But when Viguerie raised the idea of supporting another conservative in a campaign against Reagan next year, the response he got was lukewarm.

According to several people, Viguerie raised the idea last week at a breakfast meeting at his house called to arrange memorial services for McDonald and other victims of the incident.

"I was asked to join in that effort and I declined," said Paul Weyrich, a prominent New Right leader who is head of the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress.

Couple argues marijuana part of worship

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. - Court officers wheeled in 103 pounds of marijuana Tuesday as testimony opened in the trial of a couple who say that in their church, marijuana is the "body and blood of Christ."

David and Christine Nissenbaum of Monson argue that smoking marijuana is part of the worship in their church — the Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church.

The couple, both 35, were arrested March 20, 1981, on charges of trafficking, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and cultivation of marijuana.

Nissenbaum, who says he is a minister of the church, is acting as his own lawyer. He told Judge William Simons on Monday that marijuana is the "body and blood of Christ."

Lawyer Linda Thompson, who is representing Mrs. Nissenbaum, told the Hampden Superior Court jury that authorities "would want you to infer" Mrs. Nissenbaum's guilt based on the quantity of marijuana confiscated.

But she contended that jurors also should consider Mrs. Nissenbaum's testimony about her personal religious beliefs on the use of marijuana.

Nissenbaum asked Simons on Monday to consider allowing a religious defense. Last year, Superior Court Judge John Moriarty denied a motion by the Nissenbaums to dismiss the possession charges because of the couple's religious beliefs.

But Simons said a person's reason for possessing a controlled substance is not relevant to whether the person has broken the law.

Nissenbaum was convicted in December in U.S. District Court in Portlane, Maine, of conspiracy stemming from the seizure of marijuana along the Maine coast. He and other defendants cited religious freedom in that case, which has been appealed.

WASHINGTON - House Democrats, reasserting budget dominance over outnumbered Republicans on Tuesday, pushed through $1.6 billion in additions to domestic programs ranging from lowincome energy assistance to museum grants.

The mostly party-line vote was 283-124. While only seven Democrats voted with Republicans, 40 Republicans crossed over to support the measure.

The additions, contemplated in a nonbinding budget resolution passed earlier this year, would alter the spending course set two years ago by an omnibus act passed at the insistence of President Reagan.

That legislation was Reagan's first major budget victory and was achieved with the help of conservative Democrats.

But the makeup of the House was changed substantially in the 1982 elections, and the Democratic leadership has been successful this year at restoring some of the cuts ordered by that 1981 bill, known as Gramm-Latta after its authors.

WASHINGTON - Unemployment in 35 states went down in the past year, the Labor Department reported Tuesday, underlining recent improvement in the national jobless rate as the economy pulled out of a recession.

Among individual states, West Virginia stayed at the top of the list with 17.4 percent of its labor force unemployed in July, but even that high level was down slightly from previous months. North Dakota had the lowest rate at 4.3 percent.

Fourteen states still had jobless rates of 10 percent or more in July, the same as in June. But that compared favorably with the 20-state list of May. In North Carolina, unemployment fell to 8.6 percent from 10.1 percent last year. North Carolina has the 28th highest rate.

In July, the report said, 35 states logged lower rates than in the same month of 1982, a month when the recession was still deepening. Rates were up in 14 states over the same 12-month period, and the level was unchanged in one state.

WASHINGTON - The Soviet Union is building three new bases for mobile SS-20 nuclear missiles to be targeted on Western Europe while negotiating with the United States for reductions on both sides, Pentagon sources said Tuesday. When complete, the bases will be able to house 27 missiles with 81 warheads. The Soviets now have 243 of these triplewarhead missiles aimed at Western Europe and another 108 targeted on Asia.

The Pentagon sources, who would not be identified by name, said the bases are in a central area of the Soviet Union, but declined to provide any additional information. However, one official said, "It may foreshadow a plan to build more."

To match the SS-20s, the United States and its North Atlanta Treaty Organization allies agreed in 1979 to deploy 572 U.S. missiles in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands. Deployment begins in December unless an agreement is reached with the Soviets by then.

SAN FRANCISCO - A North Carolina drug company should have known huge quantities of codeine drugs sold to 10 California stores would be used for illegal purposes, the government said in a $900,000 civil suit Tuesday.

The U.S. Justice Department suit, filed in federal court, claims Burroughs-Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park violated federal laws governing distribution of controlled substances by selling "excess and suspicious quantities of the codeine content drugs" without notifying the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

"We believe the charges are unjustified," said Thomas Kennedy, the company's vice president of corporate affairs. "We deny them. Obviously, we intend to defend this action vigorously."

U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello said a California State Board of Pharmacy investigation found abuse of the pills -APC-4, Empirin-4 and Empirin Compund-4 - in combination with the sleeping pill Doriden, made by another company.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK -It would have cost more, but the state could have used a portable incinerator to treat PCB-laden soil dumped along 243 miles of N.C. roadsides, a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency scientist

The incinerator "could have been used, but at a much greater cost" than putting the tainted soil in a landfill, said John E. Brugger, a senior scientist with EPA's Municipal Environmental Research Laboratory in Edison, N.J. "I'm not sure legislation is in place that would have paid for it."

The PCBs, illegally dumped in 1978, were dug up and placed in a controversial Warren County landfill after state officials said there was no approved technology to destroy the PCBs where they

Used in power transformers, PCBs, or polychlorinated byphenyls, are believed to cause cancer.
