

Testimony ends in discrimination suit against UNC

By STUART TONKINSON
Assistant University Editor

Testimony ended Tuesday in the trial of a sex-discrimination lawsuit filed by a former UNC employee who charges that she was not hired for three UNC School of Public Health jobs because of her sex.

The suit was filed in 1977 by Helen L. Urquhart, 63, against the 16-member UNC system in the U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro. Urquhart claims that she applied for three jobs for which she was qualified, but that the jobs went to men.

until both parties submit reports to the court, a court clerk said Tuesday. Urquhart has until Oct. 31 to submit her report. The University has until Oct. 18.

The suit asks that Urquhart be awarded back pay and benefits for any job the court determined she was illegally denied, that she be given whichever of the three jobs that is first available, and that she receive pay for the job until then.

Earlier class-action and sex-discrimination suits filed by Urquhart have been thrown out of court, said Donal Dunphy, chairman of the family medicine program in the School of Public Health. He was a defendant in the earlier suits.

"It is the university's position that Urquhart was not qualified for the positions in question," Dunphy said.

Urquhart testified Monday that she has the necessary experience for the jobs for which she applied. Urquhart, who holds a master's degree from the School of Public Health, testified that she worked as a librarian for the former chairman of the school's family medicine program from 1970 to 1975, but did not have the formal title.

Dunphy said that he fired Urquhart in 1975 when he took over the program because he could not determine what her job was.

Continental Airlines resumed some of its flights at discount rates Tuesday three days after going to bankruptcy court, while a union leader denied claims by Eastern Airlines that it must chop wages by 15 percent to avoid Continental's fate.

The first Continental DC-9 took off from Houston in the fog at 7:31 a.m. with six passengers aboard. Billie Tafelski, who checked in the passengers for the flight, said she wished she had their addresses "so I could write them a thank you letter."

Pilots were working at less than half salary and the airline was flying to fewer than one-third of its previous destinations. Only 35 percent of its 12,000 employees were on the job.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan told Congress Tuesday it should abandon "harsh rhetoric and unreasonable demands" and get on with an $8.5 billion boost for the International Monetary Fund.

Failure to act, the president warned, threatens an "economic nightmare that could plague generations to come."

Reagan spoke at the opening meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, the two biggest lending agencies in the world with 146 member nations.

The president has been stymied in efforts to win congressional approval of an increase in the U.S. contribution to the IMF, although sharply different versions have passed the House and Senate.

Opponents contend the money would be used to bail out international banks that have made "imprudent" loans to developing nations that already are heavily in debt.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says that whether James Watt remains in the Cabinet is a decision Watt will have to make. By the account of his aides, Watt isn't even entertaining the question.

In a newspaper interview published Tuesday, Reagan said he will not fire Watt. Instead, whether he remains on the job is "a decision that he himself will have to make — whether he feels he has made it questionable as to whether he can be effective or not," Reagan declared.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III later told reporters that "this is a closed issue" and even if Watt were to offer his resignation, Reagan likely wouldn't accept it.

MIAMI — Tropical storm Dean, the hurricane season's fourth named storm, formed Tuesday 350 to 400 miles south-east of Cape Hatteras, the National Hurricane Center reported.

An Air Force weather reconnaissance plane was dispatched to the area shortly before noon after storm watchers noticed a low-pressure area "rapidly taking on tropical characteristics."

"It's winding up pretty fast so we'll have to watch it pretty closely," forecaster Al Gerrish said at the time.

He reported the storm formation at 4 p.m., and said the center would issue more details later in the day.

A noon report from the center in suburban Coral Gables said data gathered by ships in the area indicated the system already carried gale-force winds.

For the record

Due to a reporting error in Tuesday's story, "'83 Homecoming issue drags on," the DTH incorrectly quoted Douglas Djb- bert, director of alumni affairs, as saying the Homecoming game was scheduled against the College of William and Mary to allow the maximum number of alumni not holding student tickets to attend. The words "student tickets" should have been replaced with "season tickets." The DTH regrets the error.
