

Rally degenerates into shouting

What began as a rally for the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles turned into a shouting match Tuesday afternoon in the Pit.

Members of CARP, which is led by and follows the preachings of Rev. Sun-Myung Moon, argued with about 20 onlookers as the usual crowd of students in the Pit looked on.

CARP members urged listeners to oppose the Soviet Union and communism and to unite in a fight against the Soviets.

The most vocal of the respondents shouted statements such as "Fascists have no right to speak" and "CIA — Moonies clan. Difference faces, same clan."

The leader of the rally was Jack Ashworth, regional director for CARP, who said that CARP is an organization that follows a "universal value perspective that can unite peoples of various religions and peoples of conscience to build a better world."

"We back Reagan's strong policy against Soviet aggression in Central America, and we support counterrevolutionaries and all freedom-loving people," he said, "whether they are in Central America or Afghanistan or behind the Iron Curtain."

One of the students vocally opposing the CARP message was senior Susan Freedman.

"It's very scary because when they support the United States with no probing into what our policies are, that leans toward fascism," she said.

Another vocal opponent was Richard McGough, an anthropology graduate student and a member of the Carolina Committee on Central America.

"You have to look at how the United States government is using the (Korean Air Lines) incident," McGough said. "The United States is trying to use it to place cruise missiles in Europe, to cover up U.S. actions in Central America, to invade the Philippines," he said.

"We are by no means at the point where we can relax," Davis said. "Now we have to keep doing just as good a job as we did this past weekend."

University Lake, Chapel Hill's main water source, was 60.5 inches below full Tuesday and dropping one-half inch to one inch per day, Davis said. "This level is considered seriously low for this time of year," he said. The mandatory restrictions imposed last month will remain in effect until the lake is adequately full, but it will probably not be until November or even December before these restrictions can be lifted.

for as long as it took to install a stable government in Lebanon. Reagan said in his letter: "It would be my intention to seek congressional authorization... if circumstances require any substantial expansion in the number or role of U.S. armed forces in Lebanon."

He went on to say, "I can assure you that if our armed forces are needed in Lebanon beyond the 18-month period, it would be my intention to work together with the Congress with a view toward taking action on mutually acceptable terms."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., responded, "There is no question in my mind that the White House has made a commitment to us and he (the president) is going to live by it. I can't get that any stronger than I have it."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Reagan's assurance on the expansion in the number or role of the troops was an "effective antidote to the misunderstandings that have been caused by Secretary Shultz's statements."

Asked about the paragraph dealing with the time period, Wright said, "I don't know what that means. I guess it's a sort of a mouth-mouthed way of saying, 'I recognize that you only extended it for 18 months.'"

For the record

The Daily Tar Heel inadvertently omitted a photo of Bill Koole from a story that ran in Tuesday's DTH, ("Koole plans for Carrboro Board of Aldermen." Koole is a candidate for the Carrboro Board of Aldermen. The DTH regrets the omission.

Independent to run for mayor of Carrboro

Jim Porto, an independent candidate, officially announced his intentions to run for mayor of Carrboro Monday at a press conference at Town Hall.

"Carrboro now needs a moderate mayor who is not identified with any faction," Porto said.

A 10-year resident of Carrboro, Porto said that the town is divided into factions and that a moderate approach would bring more unity to local government.

Carrboro government is divided between two political factions — the Association for a Better Carrboro and the Carrboro Community Coalition.

Mayor Robert Drakeford is aligned with the liberal CCC, and Alderman Jim White, candidate for mayor, is endorsed by the conservative ABC.

Mayor Drakeford announced earlier that he would not seek a fourth term.

Porto said he believed that most of the town's citizens were moderates and that it was time to put factionalism aside and work for unity in town politics.

Quality of living, economic development and government efficiency are the major issues in the campaign, he said.

Porto said he supported protection of the watershed, public transportation, public bond referendum hearings and cost-benefit budget analysis.

Improvement of the bus system is one of the issues, Porto said, that would affect students. Porto supports long-range planning in the transportation department.

Porto said all of his proposed activities could be supported without increasing property taxes, "provided that creative solutions are actively sought when the conditions around these activities change."

Porto will file with the Orange County Board of Elections today.

Porto is a management consultant with Management Applications Inc. in Research Triangle Park. He is the current chairman of the Carrboro Appearance Commission.

Preston to seek seat on the Town Council

By TRACY ADAMS
Staff Writer

Nancy Preston, in her first attempt at seeking public office, Wednesday announced her candidacy for the Chapel Hill Town Council.

Preston said her decision to run was based on her concern over the proposed Thoroughfare Plan.

"I was really upset with parts of the plan, especially the one-way pairing of Franklin and Rosemary streets," she said. "I believe it would destroy the character of the downtown area."

"The next few years will be critical in Chapel Hill's development. Decisions that we make will determine whether the town's physical environment and community institutions retain a human scale." Preston said local leaders need to plan for the town's growth and development.

"I believe we are challenged to find a middle ground that accommodates growth yet does not threaten those aspects of Chapel Hill — its beauty, pace of life, sense of history and variety of people — that we all value," Preston said.

Other important campaign issues are the zoning ordinance, downtown development, parking, expansion of the public library and the water problem, Preston said.

"We can't continue to build and grow if the water problem is not resolved," Preston said. "Soon, we will be having the same problem every year."

Other than her interest in the Thoroughfare Plan, Preston said her decision to seek a council seat followed encouragement by friends.

She is married to Edwin T. Preston, a local physician. Nancy Preston was born in Tennessee but has lived in the Triangle area for about 25 years.

Preston is an active member of the University Presbyterian Church and is a former East Franklin precinct registrar. She has also served as president of the Chapel Hill Preservation Society and as a member of the Historic District Commission.

Preston said she plans to file her candidacy with the Board of Elections this week.

THE GREAT CHAPEL HILL/CARRBORO SEAT BELT PAYOFF IS ON!

WEARING SEAT BELTS CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE WEARING SEAT BELTS CAN WIN YOU PRIZES

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death for people under 34 years of age. Yes, the leading cause, ahead of every other cause.

Buckling up when you ride is the single most effective thing you can do to increase your chances of escaping serious injury or death in a crash.

To help you get into the regular habit of wearing belts, we are going to give thousands of prizes to belt wearers.

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN WIN

If you are wearing your seat belt when you are stopped by researchers from the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center—you win a prize.

For example, at a parking lot exit, we will randomly select exiting traffic. All who are belted in the selected car will receive:

1. A coupon redeemable for cash or a gift at a named merchant's location AND
2. A chance for a monthly drawing for $500 and a grand prize drawing for $1000.

The more times you are belted the more times you can win.

The van is currently circulating on Chapel Hill/Carrboro streets and UNC campus.

Buckle up Tar Heels and make those Seat Belts Pay Off!

The contest will last through October 1983 and is co-sponsored by:

- The University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center
- The North Carolina Governor's Highway Safety Program
- The General Motors Corporation
- The Village Companies
