

Dorms' racial situations considered

By AMY BRANEN
Staff Writer

University housing officials at a dorm integration forum Wednesday night said that student opinion was vital in deciding whether a new dorm assignment policy was needed.

The officials and student leaders asked the students to consider the racial situation in the dormitories and to decide what needs to be done to improve it.

"I'm here to get the expressions of the students firsthand," said Director of University housing Wayne Kuncel. "I've come to listen. I'm a newcomer here, and I've come to learn."

About 35 students attended the forum held at Morrison Residence Hall. The forum was held to get student reactions to the current racial situation and possible solutions to the situation.

Associate director of contracts for housing Collin Rustin said that if current trends are not reversed the campus would become completely segregated. It is up to individuals to talk about integration among themselves and encourage a mingling between the races, he said.

"It's going to be tough," Rustin said. "It's a slow but continual process. Someone's always going to be frustrated."

Kuncel said implementing a totally random lottery for room assignments might cause a decrease in the number of students to want to live on campus because of the lack of choice in the matter. That would cause an increase in housing costs for other students, he said.

Students voiced a variety of opinions on the matter.

"Right now most of the blacks are living on South Campus, and the whites are living on North Campus," said senior Andrea Stumpf, Campus Y co-president. "Everyone is satisfied because they feel secure. People don't realize that there is racial tension here because there is no racial interaction."

Forum organizer Scott Price, a Morrison resident assistant, said he was in favor of random dorm assignments. "It would be for the good of the individual. It's a total learning experience. You are faced with different ideas, different lifestyles; it challenges your mind and makes you reassess your opinions."

Freshman Antoine Foxworth said, "I applied for all South Campus dorms because I wanted to segregate myself. I saw the numbers of whites on North Campus and the ratio scared me. I thought I wouldn't be able to relate to the people there."

Black Greek Council President Terry Allen said, "I don't think integration is a trivial matter, but I don't think it's the cause of the racial problem. Integration may be a start, but I don't think it will solve the existing problem."

Speakers also suggested that the University provide incentives that would help bring a larger part of the black population to North Campus. Some suggestions included having a lounge on North Campus like the Upendo Lounge on South Campus and more black resident advisers.
