Sales tax hike may bring raise for teachers

The N.C. Conservation Council passed a resolution

"Interbasin transfer is not widely practiced in the eastern United States," said Bill Holman, a council member from Raleigh. "Rivers were not made to be messed with." The Colorado River dried up because big cities in California and Arizona pumped it dry, and the same thing could happen to Lake Gaston, Holman

opposing the pipeline at the council's 14th annual Fall

Membership Meeting Oct. 28-30.

North Carolina teachers may be getting a pay raise next year under a recent proposal offered by N.C. Treasurer Harlan Boyles.

Boyles has said the state sales tax should be raised 1/2 cent — a move that would add $150 million to $200 million to the state educational fund. The current tax is 4 cents.

"It's going to take it" to help improve education in North Carolina, Boyles said. "Since the mid '50s, counties have had to supplement the state fund to maintain the level of public instruction. Counties will still have to supplement the fund (under Boyles' plan), but at least it will cut down on the amount."

Boyles' plan comes in the wake of a 1/2-cent local option sales tax passed this year by the N.C. General Assembly. Counties that pass the option must allocate 40 percent of the additional sales tax revenues to schools. The increase has been enacted by 77 of the state's 100 counties.

- He said a lot of errors could also have been caused by someone who accidentally transposed digits while entering account numbers in a computer.

"We were in the middle of a telephone strike when this was being done," Stamey said. "We were trying to hook up phones in 3,750 dorm rooms with half of our force and that's a very large amount of work in a short period of time."

State legislators and education officials have been searching for ways to improve the state's schools, while at the same time minimizing expenses.

"We are in favor of anything or anybody who says that we need more money for schools," said Glenn Keever, a member of the North Carolina Association of Educators. The annual teacher salary has been steadily declining in rank for the past 10 years, he said. In 1973, North Carolina ranked 20th in the nation. Last year the state finished 44th, with an average salary of

"We are delighted that Craig Phillips, the superintendent of public instruction, admitted that our schools are in bad shape. A couple of years ago, only we were saying so."

N.C. Department of Public Instruction spokesman Tom Davis said school funding was not adequate to do the job it was supposed to do. "We've felt this way for a long time. We've had a hard time recruiting the best entering teachers and holding on to the most qualified ones. Many are lured away to private businesses, which pay a great deal more."

WASHINGTON - The House rejected on Tuesday a proposed revival of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution on a 278-147 vote that fell six short of the required twothirds majority.

The tally overrode impassioned pleas of the Democratic leadership and followed last-minute threats by special interest groups on both sides to judge lawmakers at the ballot box next year solely by their votes on the issue.

Voting for the ERA were 225 Democrats and 53 Republicans, while 109 Republicans and 38 Democrats opposed it.

The amendment, which reads simply that "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex," has twice cleared Congress but fell three states short of ratification - with 38 needed by last year's deadline. The ERA went down this time after Republicans assailed the Democratic leadership for trying to shortcut the legislation without giving members a chance to amend it and with only 40 minutes of debate.

The lawmakers rejected a final appeal by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who urged support for the ERA without an anti-abortion rider "in fairness to the women of America."

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada - U.S. invasion forces will withdraw from Grenada no later than Christmas, the acting American envoy said Tuesday after five members of the Caribbean island's provisional government were sworn in.

"Everything depends on security," acting U.S. Ambassador Charles Gillespie told reporters following the swearing-in ceremony for five members of Grenada's nine-member governing council at the official government house. Four were unable to attend. Gillespie also said U.S. troops would be out of the country "certainly by Christmas." He said the withdrawal would be "within the 60 days" required by the U.S. Congress, or earlier if Grenada's interim government requests it.

LONDON — Police dragged away chanting demonstrators who blockaded the main gate of the House of Commons on Tuesday night and arrested 300 during a protest against the arrival of Europe's first cruise missiles.

"Better red than dead, Michael!" shouted one of the demonstrators who saw Heseltine.

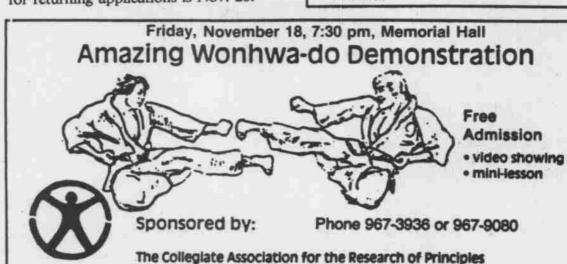

Nearly 500 people have been arrested during a series of demonstrations since the first nuclear-tipped cruise missiles arrived Monday at Greenham Common U.S. air base.

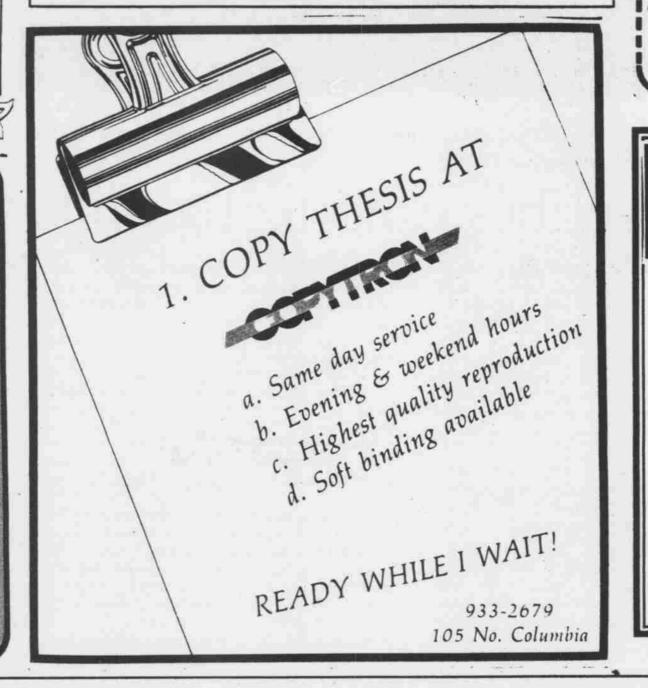

Hillsborough Mayor Lucius M. Cheshire Jr. resigned Monday night at a town board meeting. Cheshire, who was beaten in his re-election bid on Nov. 8, told the board that "a lame duck cannot address the problems facing Hillsborough."

Cheshire resigned after the board rejected a motion that would have appealed a 1979 board measure which Cheshire said would not allow the mayor to open his mail or sign town checks. Cheshire was scheduled to leave office on Dec. 1.
