A NEW CONCEPT IN STUDENT-ORIENTED CONDOMINIUMS COMES TO DOWNTOWN CHAPEL HILL.

Chancellor Square is in the avante garde of university-oriented condominiums sweeping the country with appeal to students, young professionals, parents and investors. Fifty-one townhouse-style and garden style condominiums are available at Chancellor Square.

Convenience

Located on Church Street across from Restaurant La Residence, Chancellor Square is within walking distance of the UNC campus, shops, restaurants, and famous sights and sounds of Chapel Hill.

Quality

High standards in materials and design will assure durability and create an ambiance consistent with the famous "village" character of downtown Chapel Hill. The buildings are of brick construction and each unit is complete with solid wood cabinets, full appliance packages, ceramic tiled bathrooms and other quality appointments throughout.

Sociality

Residents will enjoy meeting with friends in a beautifully landscaped courtyard with summer house, barbeque grills and recreational equipment. Stimulating social and cultural opportunities of the University are only minutes away.

Equity

Ownership with or without financing will build equity that represents a return on investment. An inquiry will bring you details about investment and tax advantages of ownership.

ago, pulling down an average of 3.6 rebounds. Mullen (6.9 points per game last year), Dan Merrifield and highly regarded freshman Tom Sheehey will also vie for forward spots. Sheehey, at 6-8 the second-tallest player on the team, should see a lot of action and may start because of his rebounding prowess. The recruit from Rochester, N.Y. has been compared to Larry Bird and Mitch Kupchak. Holland himself called Sheehey a "big Jeff Lamp."

Miller and Sheehey will be the bulk of Virginia's inside offense, and Miller is aware of that.

"I definitely feel like I have to score and rebound more this season," he said. "I have to create more opportunities for myself."

Sheehey, on the other hand, does not seem intimidated by what awaits him in his first college season. "I guess there's a little pressure to get rebounds, but not much," he said. "I'm satisfied with what I can do."

Overall, the Cavaliers have lost a lot from last season, including one of the most dominating forces in the college game since Bill Walton and Lew Alcindor. But to count Virginia out of the ACC picture because Ralph Sampson is now playing in Houston would be a big mistake.

The Cavaliers proved last year that they could win without Ralph. Virginia defeated NCAA runner-up Houston last year by nine points with Sampson out of the lineup. They also beat Boston College, Missouri, James Madison, Wake Forest and Virginia Tech with Sampson on the bench for long stretches. Holland is a team-oriented coach, and the Cavaliers have proven they can function without Sampson.

Expect another solid Virginia team this season — not of the caliber of last year's squad, but capable of 18 to 22 victories and a few upsets along the way.

"It's fun being the underdog," Carlisle said. "You have nothing to lose. I'm going to enjoy going after teams we're not expected to beat."

"He's talkative, but he's sort of to himself," says Exum. "He's a loner."

There's no better proof than the fact that he lives alone in his own apartment ("It was just best for me."). There he can have his privacy and listen to his music, which is one of his biggest hobbies. "I like music with a nice mellow beat," he says.

A nice mellow beat. It couldn't be more fitting.
