

Proportionality review not required

Supreme Court facilitates giving death sentences

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in its latest venture into the legal quagmire of capital punishment, made it easier Monday for states to send convicted murderers to their deaths.

The justices ruled, 7-2, that death sentences may be meted out even when state courts do not try to determine whether others convicted of similar crimes were treated more leniently.

Writing for the court, Justice Byron R. White said the Constitution's bar against cruel and unusual punishment does not require the "comparative proportionality review" that a lower court demanded for every death penalty case.

sentence of California murderer Robert Alton Harris for the 1978 slayings of two teen-agers in San Diego.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had thrown out his sentence, saying a proportionality review was needed to make sure Harris was not being punished arbitrarily or capriciously. The Supreme Court reversed that ruling.

It may be months before the ultimate effect of Monday's decision on the nearly 1,300 men and women on death rows nationwide is assessed.

But aside from apparently clearing the way for Harris' execution, the decision could have immediate repercussions in Texas, where some 170 people are on death row.

It was just over three months ago that White spared the life of condemned murderer James David Autry, who was already strapped to a wheeled cot in the Texas death house awaiting a lethal injection.

The last-gasp legal argument raised by Autry's lawyers was comparative proportionality review, and White said he should be kept alive until the Harris case was decided.

Texas officials said White's order last October effectively blocked all executions. It appears the state now is free to reschedule Autry's execution, and others as well.

White acknowledged that "any capital sentencing scheme may occasionally produce aberrational outcomes," but noted that the Supreme Court previously has said there is "no perfect procedure" for deciding when the death penalty should be imposed.

Justice William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, who are opposed to capital punishment under all circumstances, dissented.

Harris was convicted of murdering John Mayeski and Michael Baker after abducting the two 16-year-olds from a San Diego hamburger drive-in.

In other matters Monday, the court: • Agreed to decide whether the Federal Reserve Board acted legally last year when it approved BankAmerica Corp.'s purchase of the Charles Schwab Corp., the nation's largest "discount" securities brokerage.

• Refused to hear the death row appeal of a Deer Park, Texas, man sentenced to die for murdering his 8-year-old son by giving him Halloween candy laced with cyanide.

In the Jan. 23 DTH, Jeff Hiday was mistakenly quoted in "Hiday announces candidacy for 'Daily Tar Heel' editor," as saying "That's how I learned all the facts of the paper." The quote should have read "That's how I learned all the facets of the paper." The DTH regrets error.

State and Nation

WASHINGTON — More than 65,000 people protested the 11th anniversary of legalized abortion Monday and called President Reagan the "only candidate to support the unborn child."

Officials of the National Right to Life Committee, a nationwide group established to oppose abortion, targeted six senators — three Democrats and three Republicans — for defeat, citing their pro-choice votes. But they acknowledged at a news conference that two of the six, Republicans William Cohen of Maine and Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, probably could not be beaten.

Although calling for Reagan's reelection, the committee held off on a formal endorsement of the president until he officially announces whether he is a candidate.

WASHINGTON — Amid election year jitters over the swelling federal deficit and military involvement in Lebanon and Central America, Congress on Monday convened a short 1984 session likely to be even shorter on legislative achievement.

"I don't look for a raft of legislation out there," said Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

as the House officially ended a seven-week recess. In the Senate, the second session of the 98th Congress opened sluggishly; it took more than two hours to locate enough senators to officially call the chamber to order.

ATLANTA — Fifty-three people have been indicted in a narcotics investigation, with 30 of them accused of smuggling five tons of cocaine worth $3.8 billion into the United States, authorities announced Monday.

The 53 were named in indictments unsealed Monday in Atlanta, Los Angeles, Miami and Little Rock, Ark., with some defendants indicted in more than one city.

"We believe ... it is the largest nationwide narcotics investigation ever," FBI agent Jim Nelson said in Los Angeles.

RALEIGH — North Carolina's unemployment rate in December fell to the lowest level of 1983, dropping half a percent from November, according to figures released Monday by the state Employment Security Commission.

The December rate of 7.3 percent was down from November's 7.8 percent and below the previous low of 7.4 percent in September.

"The dramatic drop means that more than 14,000 fewer North Carolinians were unemployed in December 1983 than in November," said Glenn Jernigan, chairman of the ESC.
